CAUSTIC IN COMMENT ARE GERMAN PAPERS

Say That American Protests Over German Proclamation Waste of Words

NEUTRALS HAVE NO RIGHT TO COMPLAIN

So Declares a Member of the Reichstag, Who Says Neutrals Can Obtain Nothing Only by the Free Will of the German Government—Washington Waiting Answer to Note of United States—Neutral Diplomats Pleased With Stand Taken by the American Government.

(By United Press)

Berlin, via London, Feb. 13.—James W. Gerard, the American ambassador, called on Gottlieb von Jagow, the Foreign Secretary, at 6 o'clock last evening, and presented to him the American government's note concerning the German sea war zone proclamation.

The Berlin newspapers today print a dispatch from London stating that the American note to Germany concerning the admiralty's sea war zone contains a clear intimation that an attack on any ship carrying the American flag, without a previous inquiry as to its right to fly the flag, would lead to complications of a most serious character.

Breach of Neutrality

The Kreuz Zeitung, commenting on this, says:

"This note would amount to a breach of neutrality unless America informed Great Britain that complications of a most serious character would result from the misuse of the American flag."

The Der Tag prints an interview with Herr Erzberger, an influential member of the reichstag, in which the statesman discussed the German blockade declaration and its effect on neutral countries.

"Neutrals have no right to make claims," says Herr Erzberger, "but Germany may allow them something as a favor. The blockade does not mean that Germany will ignore the wishes of the neutrals as far as they do not endanger the German war plan. But neutrals cannot obtain anything by threats or protests, but only by the free will of the German government."

Mere Waste of Words

Other German newspapers scoff at the indignation expressed in neutral countries over the proclamation by Germany of the new naval policy against Britain. Count von Reventlow, naval writer, says:

"We have always expected American protests and outbreaks, and we expect some even more vehement. The United States should understand clearly that indignation and threats are a mere waste of words.

"The military, political and economic results of our action have all been weighed. We can imagine no threat, no measure on the part of the United States which is capable of intimidating Germany or of inducing it to modify its war against British trade.

Must Take Consequences

"The German government is fully conscious of all the possible consequences of its action, and the German people stand united behind their government. It may incidentally be questioned whether the people of the United States would do the same in all circumstances."

The Hamburger Nachrichten says:

"Beginning on February 18, everybody must take the consequences. The hate and envy of the whole world concerns us not at all. If neutrals do not protect their flags against England, they do not deserve Germany's respect."

LOVE'S TOKEN

SONG FOR SAINT VALENTINE'S DAY

I send my love across the night
To thee that art my heart's delight,
And, though the night be dark, I know
My love will find the way to go.
And, though the path be rough and long,
My love is leal, my love is strong.

What happiness if I might flee
With love across the night to thee!

JUST TWO MORE WEEKS OF PROGRESS BIG CONTEST

Six More Days in Which To Win the $50.00 In Cash

ALL CONTESTANTS RUNNING VERY CLOSE

Only One More Week in Which the Contestants Can Put Forth Their Best Efforts to Win the Cash Prizes—There Will be Many Surprises in Store for the Young Ladies and Their Friends When the Votes of Next Week are Announced—Likely to be Some Important Changes in the Standing of Candidates in some of the Districts.

One week from tonight at 10 o'clock will mark a big climax in the Progress' voting contest. At that time the $50.00 in added cash prizes will be awarded to the three ladies who have secured the three largest numbers of votes during the two weeks period covered by the special prize offer. Following that climax by just one week, or in other words, just two weeks from tonight will come the exciting finish of this great and interesting campaign that is growing more intensified each day as the end draws near.

Think of it; only twelve more working days of this popular, high class and friendly race that a few weeks ago measured by weeks. The end and the awarding of the many prizes seemed afar off then, but now it is near—very near indeed. So near in fact, is the close of the contest, and the awarding of the more than $1200.00 in prizes approaching that all of the contestants are entering into the vote getting with renewed energy, with a keener sense of appreciation of the prizes offered and with a strong determination and firm resolve that they will carry their campaigns to a successful conclusion on that eventful [illegible] Saturday, February 27th.

Votes Increasing in All Sections

As was to be expected there was a slight decrease in the voting following the very exciting finish of the first voting period last Saturday. The lull was very brief however, for the voting from all sections of the contest territory has now started in with renewed vigor than before. Today's Progress shows a very marked increase in the standing of all contestants. It has been a very busy day for the contest department and this evening promises another rush of voting such as was experienced on last Saturday. The extension subscriptions have been very numerous today and have produced a goodly number of votes for the active young ladies who have worked this important feature of the vote getting.

The strenuous activity that is now present in the contest will continue throughout the coming week, and right up to the very last minute of the big enterprise. The coming week will be an especially busy and productive one for all the contestants, and the distributing of the three big cash prizes on next Saturday evening will make the week end a most happy one for three of the ambitious ladies.

Who Will Win Cash Prizes

The question of prizes importance in this friendly, but warmly contested race, at this time is the winning of the added cash prizes that come as a surprise and are eagerly sought for by anxiety during the [illegible] this cash will be [illegible] fair and comprehensive that each and every one of the active ladies have exactly the same chance of winning

Germans in Offensive Movement

(By United Press)

Paris, Feb. 13.—The Germans are today attempting to carry out an offensive movement against the allies lines at several points and fiercely shelling Ypres, which has been the scene of much recent activity.

The Belgian-French lines near Nieuport have also been attacked by the Germans in an unsuccessful attempt to break the resistance at this point of the battle line.

354 NEW MEMBERS SECURED FOR THE LOCAL Y. M. C. A.

Gratifying Result of the Three Days of Campaigning By the Teams

Clark Boyer's Division is In Lead With 177 Names on the List, While the Other Divisions Did Remarkably Well—General Chairman Sheeder Did Most Effective Work.

The membership campaign closed last evening with a total of 354 new members. It was certainly a great sight to see one hundred or more workers seated in the gymnasium at a supper served by the girls from the Presbyterian church, and when the time came for the captains to make their reports everyone was eager to see what the total score was. From the beginning to the end of the reports there was a great deal of cheering, especially when William Wallace, captain of the Cole, announced thirty-three members for the day's work.

At the beginning of the campaign J. Clark Boyer, who is one of the most popular young men in Clearfield and is an enthusiastic worker for the Y. M. C. A., stated that the division of which he was chairman would secure as many members as the other two divisions together, and he carried out his part in the campaign by urging his teams to secure one hundred and seventy-seven members. This is exactly one-half of the entire number of new members received.

Asbury Lee, Jr., who was chairman of division B, with the aid of the teams in his division, secured 18 mem-

Local Odd Fellows Hold Open Meeting

One of the most enjoyable events in the history of local Odd Fellowship was the open meeting of Clearfield encampment, No. 232, I. O. O. F. last evening. Over one hundred members of the order were present and listend attentively to an address by Wilson K. Mohr, of Allentown, representative to the Grand lodge and P. G. M. of Pennsylvania, who gave his brother Odd Fellows one of the finest speeches they have ever heard. Rev. C. R. Allenbach, of the Lutheran church, introduced Mr. Mohr in a neat speech. A tasty lunch was served by members of the encampment.

Addresses were also made by John H. Moore, R. M. Reed, C. P. McCurdy and John W. Barratt and others. The orchestra of lodge No. 198 furnished some excellent music during the evening, and the affair throughout was one which the lodgemen will not soon forget.

The object of the meeting was to plan ways and means for increasing the membership of the local encampment.

Will Oppose Bill To Regulate Boxing

(By United Press)

Harrisburg, Pa., Feb. 13.—Boxing interests will exert every effort to kill in committee the bill introduced by Rep. S. J. Berry, of Philadelphia, authorizing the establishment in Pennsylvania of a commission to supervise the fistic sport. The measure, which resembles the New York statute, has aroused no enthusiasm in the breasts of fight promoters, chiefly because it would give the state five per cent of the gate receipts.

The Perry bill provides:

That a commission of five members, each to receive $1,000 per year, be appointed by the governor, for a two year term, and to be known as Athletic Commission of Pennsylvania. It shall "have exclusive jurisdiction over all boxing and sparring matches

CHRISTMAS DAY IN THE TRENCHES DURING A TRUCE

Swopped Cigarettes and Lies—Hard Work to Convince Germans That Truce Ended—Wonderful War News From Berlin Received by British Soldiers From the Kaiser's Troops.

By P. M. Sarl
(United Press Staff Correspondent)

London, Jan. 30.(By mail to New York)—England lost a near-Kipling when a German shrapnel burst over the British advanced line of trenches in the vicinity of Ypres and numbered among its victims Captain Robert Patrick Miles, of the Shropshire Light Infantry, attached to the Irish Rifles. Of all the letters from the front printed in the English newspapers none had breathed such a spirit of optimism nor portrayed with such humor and intimate detail the life in the trenches as those of this officer. Hitherto they had appeared anonymously. The last he wrote was a description of the amazing Christmas truce, arranged by the soldiers themselves after the pope had failed to induce the belligerent governments officially to enter into such a agreement. It did not reach England until two weeks after his death.

"We are having the most extraordinary Christmas Day imaginable," wrote Captain Miles. "A sort of unarranged and quite unauthorized, but perfectly understood and scrupulously observed truce exists between us and

Neutrals Join With America

(By United Press)

Washington, Feb. 13—Following the precedent set by the United States, Norway, Sweden and Denmark have entered formal protests to the German government against the recent war zone decree of the kaiser.

Other neutral nations are expected to make like protests against this decree of the Germans regarding the dangers of neutral shipping in what they have claimed to be a zone of war.

AIRMEN BOMBARD GERMAN POSITIONS

London, Feb. 13—The greatest force of aerial craft ever assembled for hostile purposes made yesterday a successful raid against four cities in Belgium, where Germans were believed to be establishing submarine stations.

Thirty-four machines, both seaplanes and aeroplanes, under the leadership of Wing Commander Sampson, of the British navy, rained bombs on Bruges, Zeebrugge, Blankenberghe and Ostend.

All returned safely, although Claude Grahame-White was near death for a while when he fell into the sea and was a target for German rifles and cannon until a French war vessel saved him.

Advices received today from Paris report that five French aviators dropped bombs today on the German military aerodrome at Habesheim, an Alsatian town in the outskirts of Mulhausen.

Germany Rejoices Over Reported Russian Retreat

(By United Press)

Berlin, Feb. 13.—All Germany is rejoicing today over the reported successes of Gen. Von Hindenburg in the eastern theatre of the war zone. A holiday was declared and enthusiasm is at a high pitch over what is reported as a forced retreat of the Russian forces. Several divisions of the czar's forces suffered heavily, including the crack Siberian Rifle corps. The Germans claim to now have 30,000 Russian prisoners.

Dispatches from the German front declare that the observations of the Russian aerial scouts were all that prevented a rout in the Russians' lines, but these observers foresaw the form of attack of the Germans and a retreat was immediately put in effect.

General Van Lehorn, acting under Von Hindenburg, directed the German forces in the vigorous attacks, and he is today heralded as another hero of the war.

Feared an Attack From German Submarines

(By United Press)

London, Feb. 13.—Great interest was shown today over the sailing of the Cunard liners Lusitania and St. Paul for New York. The cabins of both vessels were filled and they carried heavy cargoes.

Many Americans remained here in the fear that the steamers might be attacked by German submarines, but no uneasiness was shown on the part of the government officials or the officers of the steamship company.

Should these steamers be interfered with by German battle cruisers further sailings may be temporarily suspended. It is thought, however, that arrangements have been made for a fast and powerful escort of destroyers.

WILSON DETERMINED

It is stated at Washington that President Wilson is determined to have his shipping bill passed, even if it be necessary to call an extra session of congress for that purpose. The president knows that the next congress will not enact his foolish and dangerous measure into law, and he still hopes that he can whip a sufficient number of Democrats in the present congress into doing his will.

It is also asserted that, if congress fails to submit to his dictation, the president will go before the people with an appeal for indorsement of his pet measure. Judging from the comments of the mouthpieces of the people the president would find the people almost unanimously opposed to his attempt to aid Germany and anger the allies through the passage of the shipping bill. The people, these critical times, do not want an egotistical and blundering president to touch a match to the powder which may set off an explosion which would do great damage to this country.

The bull-headedness displayed by the president in this matter is alarming to the people of the United States. The position he and his advisors have taken since the European war began has been such as to disgrace the name of America in the eyes and opinions of the nations engaged in the conflict and disgust the people of the United States. He has brought ridicule upon the nation by his shilly-shallying policies in regard to the frequent violations of the treaties of The Hague convention, and now he seeks to turn England, France and Russia against the United States by heeding the demand of a few German-American aliens that the United States shall pour millions of dollars into the German treasury to be used to strengthen the latter's arms to destroy European civilization.

NOT A GOOD SECTION

Somebody has drafted a child labor bill which the state legislature will be asked to pass. This bill is said to have the indorsement of Governor Brumbaugh, and if this be true, then the governor is not in favor of protecting the children of Pennsylvania from slavery. To the layman the bill in question was drawn for the purpose of preventing just what the friends of children want in the way of legislation, and it looks as if certain provisions in the measure were placed there for the purpose of arousing public opposition to its passage.

This bill provides that no child under fourteen years of age shall sell newspapers, magazines, periodicals or other publications. Against this provision every daily newspaper in the state will raise its voice. It is necessary to employ boys to sell newspapers or to increase the price of the papers, because boys can and do do the work at lower wages than older persons would do it. The occupation of selling newspapers is not a hazardous or harmful one, and the boys are given an opportunity to earn a little money in useful work instead of loafing on the streets or in worse places.

It was the hope of the advocates of a child labor bill that a measure would be passed which would prevent the employment of boys under fourteen years of age in mills, mines and factories, where they are given tasks which sap their strength and prevent the development of their minds. But the bill which it is asserted the governor approves exempts miners employed in the mining industries—breaker-boys, whose occupation is one of the most unpleasant known to American industries. Surely there is more danger to life and mentality to boys who work in mines than there is to boys who sell newspapers.

It looks very much as if the framers of this bill placed the newspaper snake therein for the purpose of arousing opposition and giving the legislature an excuse for defeating the measure. That provision was not necessary, and the newspapers of the state should not be slow to warn members of the legislature that it will be an unwise thing for them to vote in favor of a bill containing this provision. The public, which now pays but a penny a day for a newspaper, should also protest against this provision, for its enactment into law would mean an increase to two cents a copy for al lnewspapers bought from boys on the street.

THE VALENTINE

I'll rhyme you, dear, a Valentine—
At least I'll do my best.
Already I've a fair third line,
And hope to get the rest.
A quatrain. Good! By Jove, I've got
At least a fairish start—
But now I'm stuck—And there's a blot!
But I'll hang on, Dear Heart!

Its smoothness may be full of dents;
It's whole construction flimsy;
Devoid of happy sentiments
And sans the frailest whimsey.
But though it lacks Byronic strains
It really doesn't matter.
Just so you know I took these pains
To carpenter my chatter.

Thou hast a love song in thine eye
How's that for pure iambic?
And don't you think it shows that I
Can wax quite dithyrambic?
Well, here's another stanza just
About three quarters done.
Your glance is like the moonbeam dust
Your smile is like the sun.

There, now. The thing's almost complete!
But as I look it o'er * * *
I fancy it were more discreet
To brush it up before
I mail it . . . Gosh! I can't. I fear
It is no use to bandy.
I write a Valentine—but dear,
I think I'll SEND you candy!

Wilson Threatens Extra Session in His Fight

(By United Press)

Washington, Feb. 13.—President Wilson is fighting to save his prestige in the continued contest over the ship purchase bill. This alone prevented the bill from being laid aside in the senate Thursday. It will probably keep the measure before the body for several days longer, because the president will not acknowledge defeat and is demanding that a semblance of a fight be maintained for his project regardless of consequences.

He declared Thursday that if the ship-purchase bill is not passed at this session he will call an extra session of the next congress immediately and that the bill will then be forced through.

An attempt to force through a cloture rule on the Wilson shipping bill failed in the senate yesterday by one vote.

Representative Kitchin, who has already been chosen by the caucus of house Democrats to succeed Underwood as the Democratic leader in the next house, has declared himself unequivocally against the bill. He went to the White House Thursday in response to a summons from the president and told the president frankly that he did not favor the measure in the senate.

Kitchin has informed the president that he does not want to see an extra session of congress, and that if the ship-purchase bill is dropped now so that the appropriation bills can be put through, there will be no reason for an extra session.

A great many of the house Democrats agree with Kitchin. However, there is so little likelihood that the appropriations can be disposed of that an extra session seems inevitable.

Kitchin put forward in the house Thursday night the new plan to avert an extra session. The compromise contemplates the passage through the house next week of the compromise bill suggested by Senator Gore, with an amendment that would terminate the government's avtivities in the shipping business two years after the close of the European war.

Despite President Wilson's announced determination to stand by the bill now before the senate in its present form Kitchin said the house leaders proposed to put this measure before the senate and give the president an opportunity to accept in the event of the total failure of the pending bill.

The president's attitude is rapidly becoming one of the extreme stubbornness, rather than of executive strength.

He is understood to have approved all the propositions of changed rules anad will be as exacting in whatever fight is made over these propositions as he has been in his demands upon his supporters to this point in the fight for the bill itself.

It is conceded that until the present time the president and his cabinet assistants have failed to create any public sentiment in favor of his bill.

The public has seen the price of wheat and of flour going steadily upward, and the price of bread increased to 6 cents.

The administration is, therefore, caleld upon to state if it is one of its purposes to drive the price of wheat still higher and by the expenditure of public money in reducing the cost of sending foodstuffs out of the country increase bread to 7 cents to the American consumer.

The latest argument advanced by the secretary of the treasury is that there is congestion of wheat at the various ports of the United States and that government ships are needed for its transportation. Market conditions in the last month have shown that every occurrence which has added to the difficulties of transporting wheat has caused an immediate decline in the price.

Senator Lodge severely criticised President Wilson in a speech on the bill in the senate Thursday, saying:

"It is impossible to consider this bill without considering the executive influence that has been the great force behind it. The doctrine of divine right has fortunately never been applied to the president of the United States. But I think the president who, when he approaches a new subject, the first thing he does is to make up his mind. Information is looked upon as a mere impertinence. He recalls to mind a verse popular some years ago:

My name is Benjamin Jowett,
Master of Baliol college;
Whatever is known I know it;
Whatever I don't know isn't knowledge.

"This is an unfortunate attitude even for a college professor, but in the president of the United States it is a dangerous attitude."

WOULD HAVE DEAN FOR GIRLS IN HIGH SCHOOLS

(By United Press)

Denver, Feb. 13.—To off-set the tendency of high school girls to wear the blouses cut too low in the neck, their skirts too short and their hair too high, a Denver school teacher believes a dean for girls should be provided for every high school. The teacher is Miss B. Schmitz.

"Mothers to a certain extent lose the control and confidence of their daughters after they have reached the high school age," said Miss Schmitz today. "A motherly woman who understands how to deal with growing girls should be placed in each high school to advise the young women.

"The tight skirt and the split skirt have gone, but other evils have appeared. The girls are beginning their skirts too short, their hair too high and their blouses too low in the neck. If mothers fail to detect these as well as other offensive things, there should be a woman provided by the school board to help the girls along."

Should Be Re-elected

John H. Moore, Moore, Esq., our present protonotary, has filled the office in a manner that is a credit both to himself and to the voters who elected him. He is one of the most faithful, competent and obliging officials who has ever held this position.

Mr. Moore and his capable deputies have transacted the business of the office during the past three years so as to give general satisfaction to all who have had occasion to avail themselves of their services.

For many years it has been the practice to re-nominate and re-elect the Prothonotary of this county for a second term. Grant H. Thompson and Roll B. Thompson, the two predecessors of our present Prothonotary, were each given two terms. We believe this is a good practice as it results in more efficent conduct of the office and we see no reason why it should be deviated from this year.

The Mountaineer, therefore favors Mr. Moore's re-nomination and re-election.—Curwensville Mountaineer.

NEW JERSEY LAUNCHES WILSON 1916 BOOM

(By United Press)

Trenton, N. J., Feb. 13.—Although President Wilson may not have meant to "start anything" with respect to a second term when he said in his Indianapolis speech that the people might later on have an opportunity to render a decision on his accomplishments, the Democracy of New Jersey certainly has started out with the single purpose of accomplishing that which the president disavowed. The state committee prior to the fall election took quarters here in a building not far from the capitol and past which all the politicians must go on their way to the seat of the state government.

The purpose of establishing these quarters last fall was not for the purpose of issuing campaign literature and helping keep New Jersey in line in 1914 so much as it was to begin the fight that the Democrats of the state intend making in 1916 to return Woodrow Wilson to the president's chair. So whether or not the president's remarks at Indianapolis recently bore the significance that some gave them, New Jersey has already taken the initiative in this matter. True there is not over much activity in the committee's offices here at present, just a stenographer or two handling the mail, but in the windows hang pictures of the president, so that "he who runs may read" the purpose of the establishment, to be the renomination and re-election of Woodrow Wilson in 1916 as president of the United States.

TABLET FOR LINCOLN'S GETTYSBURG ADDRESS

(By United Press)

Harrisburg, Feb. 13.—There is no place in all Pennsylvania where President Lincoln's immortal Gettysburg address is perpetuated in bronze. Rep. William Adams, of Luzerne, proposes that this oversight be remedied.

Adams is sponsor for a bill making a $10,000 appropriation to place a tablet containing Lincoln't address in the hall of the house representatives, back of the speaker's chair, just beneath the Abbey picture of the Hoptheosis of Pennsylvania.

At the present time there is no reference to Lincoln in the whole capitol building, although it contains many flags carried in the Civil war.

REWARDS FOR CONSPICUOUS AND EVERY DAY SERVICE IN THE NAVY

Secretary of the Navy Daniels presenting honor medals to thirteen sailors for bravery at Vera Cruz, Mexico. Presentation took place on board the battleship Florida at the Brooklyn navy yard. View of medal also shown.

ON the afternoon of Jan. 6, 1914, there were assembled on the quarterdeck of the United States ship Florida in the presence of the secretary of the navy, the commander in chief of the United States Atlantic fleet, his staff, the captains and officers of vessels then in port and hundreds of their comrades of the ranks, who had shared their dangers and borne with patience months of tedious duty in a tropical clime, thirteen of the fourteen enlisted men of the navy who so distinguished themselves under fire at Vera Cruz that they were to receive the much prized medal of honor. It was the tribute of the country, voiced by that branch of the service in which they served, for their meritorious conduct when put to the severest test. In addressing our newest heroes at the presentation exercises Secretary Daniels said:

"The medals presented today are tokens of a grateful country's appreciation of work nobly done, of duty well performed, of readiness to face grave danger. They are given to men who by their conduct under fire have won renown not only for themselves, but for their companions in arms, their comrades who, while hoping for opportunities for themselves, yet rejoice in the good fortune of their shipmates in being where the fight was thickest, the field of service greatest, for that is the ambition of men bearing arms. And that is one of the most pleasing elements in the gratification we feel today—this readiness to extend the merit and the honor to all who wear the uniform.

"You know that the signal most prized in the fleet is the one flying from the flagship telling, with its letters of many colors, that something has been 'well done,' and that, while some particular one, perhaps, has won it, yet the honor is for the ship and all its crew of officers and men whose teamwork has made the winning possible.

"The bluejacket! Let us take off our hats to him in the street, for his uniform is the blue badge of courage; take him by the hand, for his hand protects our homes; treat him with respect, for he rings true, and his heart is of the finest gold."

The medal of honor is the highest recognition any American can receive from his government. All fourteen who received the medal of honor received also a gratuity of $100. Thirteen of them were advanced six months ago to the next higher rating, and the fourteenth man was given permission to participate in the next examinations for warrant officer.

All fifty-two of the other enlisted men who distinguished themselves less only than those awarded the medal of honor received letters of commendation from the navy department. Six were allowed to participate in the next examination for warrant officer, and forty-six were immediately advanced to the next higher rating than they then held.

Such are the substantial rewards the navy accords her heroes. These are, however, symbols of recognition for services that are unusual, caused generally by circumstances we strive earnestly to avoid. Through the dispensation of a protecting Providence we seldom have had to brave the dangers of the sword, and in the annals of our history the peace hero vies for distinction with the hero baptized by fire.

But before relating how Uncle Sam rewards the peace hero let us see what happens to his naval employee who acquit themselves with credit in the ordinary functions of their profession.

Extended service is recognized with increased pay. Every American citizen who enlists for the second time receives a bonus of $5.50 per month in addition to the pay of his rating, and for each enlistment after the second he receives an additional bonus of $3.30 a month.

The sick in active service receive medical care without charge. Any disabled person who has served as an enlisted man in the navy for ten years and has not been discharged for misconduct may apply for aid from the surplus income of the naval pension fund, even though he may be out of the service at the time, and after twenty years of service any enlisted man disabled from sea service by reason of age or infirmity and who has not been discharged for misconduct shall be entitled to a pension equal to half of his pay or be admitted to the Naval home, Philadelphia, Pa.

After thirty years of service any enlisted man may be placed on the retired list if he desires with an income of three-quarters of his pay and allowances for rations, quarters, fuel and light, amounting to $15.75 a month. For retirement all service in the navy, army or marine corps is credited.

In case of loss of life in active service the dependent relative designated as beneficiary receives such pensions as are prescribed by the law, and when disabilities are incurred in the line of duty disqualifying a man for further naval service he receives a pension allowance, regulated according to the seriousness of the injury.

Good conduct is, of course, essential to success in every walk, and, although bad conduct (noncompliance with the regulations, tardiness and slovenly deportment) can be tolerated least of all in military professions, the men who comport themselves well during two enlistments of four years each may, upon the recommendation of their respective captains, wear the good conduct medal, which carries with it 82 cents a month additional pay.

Good conduct is rewarded also with more frequent and extended leave than that allowed offenders of discipline. Leave is always granted to men with good records as frequently as conditions allow, and during the Christmas holidays it is extended over a period of ten days or two weeks. The navy has always sought to lessen any discomfitures caused a sailor or his family through his temporarily enforced absence from home. The presence of a postoffice on every large vessel not only makes possible frequent and prompt communication between ship and shore, but places at the disposition of men at sea the wonderful facilities of the postoffice department, including money orders. The navy also conducts an allotment office at Washington, and any sailor may allot a certain portion of his monthly pay to his family, deducting it from his salary, and it will be sent each month promptly. In this way the families of men on distant stations receive a monthly income as soon as if the relative were at home. Each month the navy disburses about $463,600 by this method of payment.

On board each vessel, accessible to all men in the service, the navy maintains a savings bank, conducted in all respects like a savings bank ashore. Deposits are received, and withdrawals may be made, and interest is paid at the rate of 4 per cent per annum. That the sailor is a saving man is conclusively shown by the figures, $270,677.14 being on deposit on Dec. 31 last.

Considering the hazards of the sea, the loss of life and limb is small. To those who may by extreme and heroic daring have endangered their own lives in saving or endeavoring to save the lives of others from the perils of the sea gold life saving medals may be awarded, and in cases not sufficiently distinguished to deserve recognition in gold silver medals may be bestowed.

Uncle Sam takes pretty good care of his navy boys. It will be seen from the foregoing how he rewards continuous service, good conduct, bravery under fire and heroism in peace; how he nurses in time of illness and in their old age provides comfort for those who serve him long. Many avenues to promotion, with increased compensation, are also available to all in the service. But that is rather the subject of another story. To those, however, who are interested complete information will be sent direct by the bureau of navigation at Washington or the navy recruiting station, Indianapolis, Ind.

His "Junior Partner" Entered.

Littleman was telling the young bachelors at a recent affair uptown just how to manage a wife.

"When you young fellows are married, you must take the upper hand at once," he said. "No weakness, no sentiment! Make your wife understand that, though you love her and so forth, she is the junior partner. If necessary, resort to the effective methods of our cavemen ancestors—use the heavy hand! Put her nose to the domestic grindstone. Why, when I speak to my wife"—

Holland's Abode of Peace.

Zeist, in Holland, is best known as the abode of peace. The religious community of Moravians has been settled there for over a century and a half. Its gray, sober looking buildings stand in their own well cultivated grounds, within which the members lead a life of Quaker-like simplicity. There is little display even of the goods they make, particularly their tinwares, which are sold in small rooms that have no likeness to shops except for the plain counter that runs across them.—London Chronicle.

An Index and a Prophecy.

The report of the research board of the Methodist Episcopal church on its investigations relative to the liquor traffic is both an index and a prophecy. The board wanted to know what was the public opinion on the question. In quite the correct way it sought the answer among the newspaper of the country, the reflectors of that public view.

A review of the papers which decline liquor advertising, shows some other items of interest. Naturally the first thought would be that most of the papers were located in the solid south where the negro problem complicates matters and promotes prohibition sentiment, yet the tables show that only 46 of the papers were located south of Mason's and Dixon's line and east of the Mississippi. The remainder speak for the balance of the country.

Strong as the showing made by the research board is, it is not complete. The Philadelphia North American was not on the list, yet the Philadelphia North American accepts no liquor ads. The same is true of the Pittsburg Gazette-Times. Recently also the Chicargo Herald eliminated liquor advertising. The board found many papers taking no new contracts for the class of advertising.

For the one who reads the signs of the times there is no mistaking the meaning of these figures. The public trend is against the liquor traffic. The time of coming of its destruction may divide opinion, but the conclusion is unanimous. The traffic is doomed. The wise dealer is the one who gets out of the business while the getting is good.—The Tribune, South Bend, Indiana.

Charity Board Urges Prohibition

The board of Commissioners of Public Charities, in its biennial report just submitted to the legislature of Pennsylvania, urges the prohibition of alcohol and other drugs, declaring that the state's institutions are filled with their victims. This development is unprecedented in the east.

Pennsylvania is Simmering Again

The courts have wiped out fifty saloons in Columbia county, Pennsylvania. It is an auspicious start of the yearly melee in that state. A Johnstown evening paper aroused the anger of brewery men when it printed the names of the signers of liquor license applications, and thus held them up to "ridicule and contempt," as the liquor men themselves said. Judge George S. Criswell, of Venango county, has announced a change in policy, saying that hereafter men in the liquor business will not be given the benefit of the doubt when they are charged with misconduct. In Crawford county the drys report the strongest organization they have ever had. Evangelistic campaigns in various parts of the state have troubled the saloon men greatly. In Warren county petitions for licenses are being held back until the departure of an evangelist.

One of the notable victories for the dry forces was the decision of the Boyce Weeklies, including the Chicago Saturday Blade, to eliminate all liquor advertising. In a powerful editorial announcement the Chicago Blade says: "Alcohol is a poison, and the Boyce Weeklies will hereafter print no advertising of whisky, wines, beer or other alcoholic liquors."

DRESS WARM AND KEEP FEET DRY

Tells Rheumatism Sufferers to Take Salts and Get Rid of Uric Acid.

Rheumatism is no respecter of age, sex, color or rank. If not the most dangerous of human afflictions it is one of the most painful. Those subject to rheumatism should eat less meat, dress as warmly as possible, avoid any undue exposure and, above all, drink lots of pure water.

Rheumatism is caused by uric acid which is generated in the bowels and absorbed into the blood. It is the function of the kidneys to filter this acid from the blood and cast it out in the urine; the pores of the skin are also a means of freeing the blood of this impurity. In damp and chilly, cold weather the skin pores are closed thus forcing the kidneys to do double work, they become weak and sluggish and fail to eliminate this uric acid which keeps accumulating and circulating through the system, eventually settling in the joints and muscles causing stiffness, soreness and pain called rheumatism.

At the first twinge of rheumatism get from any pharmacy about four ounces of Jad Salts; put a tablespoonful in a glass of water and drink before breakfast each morning for a week. This is said to eliminate uric acid by stimulating the kidneys to normal action, thus ridding the blood of these impurities.

Jad Salts is inexpensive, harmless and is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia and is used with excellent results by thousands of folks who are subject to rheumatism. Here you have a pleasant, effervescent lithia-water drink which overcomes uric acid and is beneficial to your kidneys as well.

SUNDAY SCHOOL.

Lesson VII.—First Quarter, For Feb. 14, 1915.

THE INTERNATIONAL SERIES.

Text of the Lesson, I Sam. iii, 1-13, 19, 20—Memory Verses, 8, 9—Golden Text, I Sam. iii, 9—Commentary Prepared by Rev. D. M. Stearns.

What a specially great lesson this is for boys, with something for every one, young and old. In all Scripture there is a message from the heart of God to each individual heart that reads. It is true always, as in the last verse of our lesson chapter, that the Lord reveals Himself by His word. The Scriptures are the revelation of God to man, and the Lord Jesus Christ is the Living Word, in whom we see the Father, even as He said, "He that hath seen Me hath seen the Father" (John xiv, 9). Our lesson opens with Samuel ministering unto the Lord. See also chapter ii, 11, 18. This is not the word which is translated to "minister in the priest's office," but the word to serve or minister, as when Joshua ministered to Moses (Ex. xxxiii, 11; Josh. i, 1).

Even a child can serve Him who came not to be ministered unto, but to minister (Matt. xx, 28). May we always be able to say from the heart, "Whose I am and whom I serve," and count it our highest privilege to minister unto Him (Acts xxvii, 23; Luke vii, 8; Dan. vi, 16). In the revised version the words "precious" and "open" are in the margin "rare" and "frequent," and the meaning probably is that any special message from the Lord was of rare occurrence or it had been some time since He had spoken. The book of Judges ended with every man doing right in his own eyes (xxi, 25), and now Eli, the priest of the tabernacle, which was then at Shiloh (i, 3; Josh. xviii, 1, 10), was somewhat out of fellowship, for he mistook broken hearted, praying Hannah for a drunken woman and did not control his own sons, honoring them above God, so that a man of God had to come to him with a reproof and a warning (i, 12-16; ii, 27-36).

Before we consider the call of Samuel in our lesson let us look at the circumstances of his birth. His father, Elkanah, seems to have been a devout man, going up from year to year to worship and to sacrifice unto the Lord of hosts in Shiloh (i, 3). But he had two wives, which was contrary to God's original arrangement and always brought trouble. Hannah, who had no children, was continually taunted by the other, her adversary, provoked sore and made to fret and grieve (i, 4-8). Her refuge was prayer unto the Lord, and He heard her and gave her this son Samuel (i, 10-20). She called him Samuel because she asked God for him (i, 20, margin), and when she had weaned him she took him to Shiloh to serve the Lord in the tabernacle with Eli, visiting him from year to year when she went up to worship and taking him a little coat (i, 24-28; ii, 18, 19).

The Lord abundantly rewarded her for the gift of her firstborn, for He gave her five others, three sons and two daughters (ii, 20, 21). So Samuel grew before the Lord and was in favor both with the Lord and also with men, and the Lord was with him, and all Israel knew that he was established to be a prophet of the Lord (ii, 21, 26). How beautifully the Lord did bless the boy who was dedicated to Him even before his birth, and how greatly He did reward his mother and cause her to forget her misery and sing for joy! Her song in chapter ii, 1-10, which is also called a prayer, is one of the most beautiful on record.

Returning to our lesson story, we read that one night, or perhaps toward the dawn (verses 2, 3, 15), Samuel heard some one call him, and, supposing it to be Eli, he ran to him, but, on being assured that Eli had not called him, he lay down again. The second time he heard his name and went again to Eli, but was assured as before. Not until he heard his name the third time and for the third time went to Eli with the words "Here am I" did Eli perceive that the Lord was calling the child. Then he said to him, "If you are called again say, 'Speak, Lord, for thy servant heareth.'" For the fourth time the Lord called him and this time mentioned his name twice—"Samuel, Samuel."

I have found only seven people in the Bible who were thus addressed, and there must be some significance in it, whether we can see it or not. Look them up and ponder the circumstances prayerfully. On hearing this fourth call Samuel replied as Eli taught him, and then the Lord gave to Samuel the solemn message for Eli, which he faithfully repeated to him in the morning, telling him every whit and hiding nothing from him. It is doubtful if either of them slept again that night. Samuel had his first message directly from the Lord, and Eli was no doubt wondering what it could be. They each had enough to think about. Samuel from this time onward seems to have had always an ear for God. Note the peculiar language of I Sam. ix, 15, and may we all have similarly anointed ears to hear His voice. Eli saw the justice of it all, remembering no doubt the words of the man of God in chapter ii, 27, and he submissively said: "It is the Lord. Let Him do what seemeth Him good" (verse 18). Compare Job i, 21; ii, 10; Ps. xxxix, 9; Isa. xxxviii, 15; xxxix, 8.

A Violet and a Valentine

By RUBY DOUGLAS EVANS.

[Copyright, 1913, by American Press Association.]

VIOLET SARGENT slipped into a pretty kimono and then sought the most comfortable chair her small room afforded. Already her tiny kettle was beginning to sing over its steady blue flame and the miniature table was gleaming with its white cloth and single cup and plate.

It was her custom to eat her evening meal alone in her little hall room. But tonight—it was the eve of St. Valentine's day—she was conscious of a vague longing for companionship. And not even a lace paper heart had greeted her in the dingy hall below to tell her it was St. Valentine's anniversary. How completely the home folks in the western town had forgotten! It was true, she admitted, she had few home folks left.

She was roused from her reverie by a loud noise on the stairs below. Some one was dragging up a trunk. Violet wondered whose it might be.

HE TOOK HER LITTLE GLOVED HAND AND LED HER INTO THE PARLOR.

A thundering noise on the door startled her from her first mouthful of dinner. She jumped to her feet and remembering her attire, opened the door a crack to tell the expressman he was in the wrong place.

"Miss Violet Sargent," announced the gruff voice of the man, and he thrust open the door and deposited his burden on the only available spot in the room. Then without further words he was gone.

Violet closed the door and stood staring at the trunk. It was new and strong and large. And on it in unmistakable letters was painted her own name, Violet Sargent, with the initials.

The trunk was securely strapped and locked. Furthermore, it took up the only floor space she had in the room, but she was helpless. She could not unlock it, for she had no key.

A moment after she had climbed over it to resume her dinner there came another knock upon the door.

"Yes?" she called, hoping she might not have to scale the trunk again.

"Miss Sargent?" said a voice.

Violet opened the door to take a note addressed to her. She signed for it and closed the door again. It was addressed in typewriting and was quite ouky. There was no clew to the sender on the envelope.

She tore open the message and in it found a trunk key folded within a typewritten note which said, "This is the key to your valentine."

The inside of the trunk was spacious and composed of many trays and partitions, and as the girl opened one after another her color deepened and great tears rolled down her cheeks.

One by one she laid on the couch and chairs all about her the most exquisite of garments, from satin slippers of her own size to a wedding gown of cream satin. In her wildest dreams in the days when she had been engaged to Bob Saunders, in those happy days before she had decided to come east and make her own way in the world, she had not fancied anything so beautiful.

And who but Bob could have done this? It had been at a Valentine party four years ago that she and Bob had become engaged.

She was startled by a third knock at her door, this time a gentle, fumbling knock. "Yes?" called Violet, drying her eyes.

"It's Katie, Miss Sergeant," came in the soft brogue of the maid.

"Come in, Katie."

The girl opened the door and closed it behind her. She spoke in an awe stricken voice, and her eyes grew wide with wonder as she beheld the bewildering array of unmistakable bridal finery lying about the room.

"There's—there's a lady and gentleman below. They want to see you," announced Katie.

"Who are they?" Violet asked, trembling from head to foot.

"They said you'd know and—Miss Sergeant, I—they came in a big automobile and—and it's standing outside waiting for them now. The lady whispered to me to have you dress in—in your new clothes before coming down, that they would wait."

For a few moments Violet stood looking helplessly about her, the maid staring. At last, impulsively, she looked up.

"Katie," she said, "please close the door and help me to dress."

"Yes, ma'am, I will," said Katie.

It took half an hour to select the dainty clothes and don them.

"Now, Katie, will I do?" asked Violet, flushed and happy. As she dressed she had reasoned it all out logically in her mind, and the situation seemed as conventional as if she had always known this was to be her wedding night.

"Katie, I—I haven't said anything about this to any one. It isn't best to a boarding house where you know no one, but—I'm going to be married. I—I'll return and arrange everything with Mrs. Jordan, but meantime will you straighten my things and pack this trunk and my own with all but my garments to wear?"

When Violet reached the foot of the stairs there stood Bob, his eyes devouring her. He knew by the length of time she had taken that she had understood and was coming down to be his bride. He took the little gloved hand she gave him and led her to the dim parlor.

"Violet!" cried Bob's married sister, "I have been nearly sinking to death with nervousness. I never heard of such a mad, romantic thing in all my life. Bob has the temerity of a brigadier general. Now be quick!"

And Violet was hurried off with her sister's new husband to be to the little church where the minister was in readiness to make her Bob's wife.

"I knew you'd be more apt to marry me in this mad, unconventional way than you ever would in a sane and dignified fashion," said her husband hours afterward. "And couldn't bear to think of your working here in New York alone any longer, even though you declared to me you loved it and—probably would never marry me!"

This Day Let Lovers Fond Entwine Their Hands, And Bless St. Valentine

VALENTINE DAY PARTIES.

The 14th of February is becoming specially chosen for children's parties, at which St. Valentine rules supreme. The following hints for table decorations may be of use:

Get heavy red pasteboard hearts of the largest size. Take four of these and tie the points of the hearts together at the top with narrow red ribbon of the same shade; then set them up tent fashion in the center of the table. Through the openings at the bottom of the tent let the same narrow red ribbon extend to each place; on each end of the ribbon inside the tent tie valentines for each guest. At a given signal you may allow each guest to draw forth his or her individual valentine.

The heart tent can be decorated also with small red hearts, all tied to the ribbon at the top and allowed to hang profusely in every direction at ribbon ends.

AID FOR ST. VALENTINE.

Old Time Books Instructed Lovers in Art of Writing Love Letters.

"Carvalho's Polite Valentine Writer; or, The Lovers' Repository," a little book published nearly a hundred years ago, contains "a capital collection of all the new valentines and answers"—for the recipient was in duty bound to respond to her lover's assault upon her heart.

The following amorous ditty in script was subjoined to a picture, highly colored, of a girl eagerly stretching out her hand to receive a missive held in the beak of a dove:

A Letter from the Youth I love.
Pray give it me my pretty Dove:
May Cupid both our hearts incline
To grace the morn of Valentine.

Briefly conclusive is this one:

Sweetly smiling, quite divine,
I chuse thee for my Valentine.

A sample of a reply for a girl to use to an unwelcome suitor is this:

Dear sir, you're so foppish
And scented so fine;
I'll not have a man monkey
For my Valentine.

A VALENTINE

By ARTHUR J. BURDICK

[Copyright, 1915, by American Press Association.]

Sweet Love passed through the garden
And plucked a rose for me.
I took it, and I kissed it.
I send it, dear, to thee.
For, though 'tis fair and fragrant,
Its beauty is not mine.
Love, bear it to my dear one
And lay it on her shrine.

The rose is lacking beauty
When 'tis not shared with thee.
Its sweetness is but wasted
If known alone by me.
So Love shall bear it further.
'Tis thine by right divine,
For beauty's stamp is on it
And makes it only thine.

"I SEND LOVE TO THEE WINGING, TO SING WHERE THOU CANST HEAR."

Love paused beneath my window
And sang a tender lay.
I bade him cease his singing
And fare him on his way.
That song, indeed, is wasted
Which falls not on thy ear.
I send Love to thee winging,
To sing where thou canst hear.

And if Love's roses please thee
And if Love's songs are sweet
I've songs to sing and roses
To scatter at thy feet.
And songs will be the sweeter
And roses seem more fair,
Dear heart, if one who loves thee
Can in thy pleasures share.

War Caused First Valentine.

It was at the battle of Agincourt in 1415 that Charles, duke of Orleans, was taken after a fierce charge in a vain attempt to retrieve the French fortunes of the day, and for twenty-five years thereafter he remained a prisoner in the Tower of London until ransomed for 300,000 crowns by Philip the Good of Burgundy. In order to relieve the tedium of his long confinement the captive duke composed about sixty love poems, which, tradition asserts, were the first valentines ever penned.

Everybody's Valentine.

To you—somewhere,
Here—there—
Roses may bloom around you,
Maybe snow has found you
On land—at sea—
You don't know me,
Nor do I know you,
But feeling blue
I pen this line
To those who have no valentine!

ST. VALENTINE AS HYMEN.

Got the Credit For Helping Along Marriages Sixty Years Ago.

Just to show that Valentine's day, with all its significance of betrothals and marriages, was not unappreciated in America in the nineteenth century it might be well to quote an advertisement which appeared in the Democrat of Feb. 3, 1853, in Wooster, O.:

"The great increase in marriages throughout Wayne county during the past year is said to be occasioned by the superior excellence of the valentines sold by George Henry. Indeed, so complete was his success that Cupid has again commissioned him as his great high priest of Love, Courtship and Marriage."

Pepys' Valentine Day.

The immortal Pepys, who chronicled the gossip of England in the seventeenth century, wrote one day in his immortal diary, "I am also this year my wife's valentine, and it will cost me £5, but that I must have laid out if we had not been valentines."

Men Who Give Valentines Must Pledge Votes For Suffrage, Too

MISS SARA MILLER

Pretty suffragist who originated novel idea of winning masculine votes over to "the Cause."

Harrisburg, Pa., Feb. 12.—Saint Valentine has been adopted as the patron saint of the Pennsylvania suffragists. Moreover, they intend to put him to practical use.

The secret leaked out at State Headquarters here today when it was announced that every suffragist in the State who received a valentine tomorrow—and there are several hundred thousand who have reasons to expect one—will ask the donor to supplement his symbol of devotion by a pledge to vote for the suffrage amendment to the Constitution on election day.

The originator of this novel idea to win the masculine votes that are so essential to a feminine victory at the polls, is Miss Sara Miller, of Harrisburg. When she put it up to the executives at State Headquarters they gave it their hearty endorsement, as they saw possibilities in it that were highly practical, as well as romantic.

These possibilities were explained briefly today by Mrs. Frank M. Roessing, president of the Pennsylvania Woman Suffrage Association.

"St. Valentine offerings are usually indicative of affection," she said. "Where there is affection it is fair to assume that there is also the desire to please. The pledge of a masculine vote in favor of the suffrage amendment will please every sincere suffragist. We hope St. Valentine will help us get a lot of them. There's the whole story in a nutshell."

Persons with a mania for figuring may now take out their pads and pencils and estimate the number of valentines it will take to assure a "Votes for Women" victory at the polls this year. The suffragists admit that it will run into big figures, but they are not at all depressed by the outlook. Some of them figure that they can swing even more than one vote on St. Valentine's Day.

SIX CONVENTIONS A DAY DURING SAN FRANCISCO FAIR

(By United Press)

San Francisco, Feb. 13.—An average of six big conventions daily will be held in San Francisco during the life of the Panama-Pacific International exposition which will open here February 20, and run until December 4.

James A. Barr, director of congresses of the exposition, makes this estimate on the basis of advices received by him and he gives assurance that 500 conventions will hold their sessions here. He estimates that these gatherings will bring to the city and the fair between 800,000 and 1,000,000 persons.

Delegates will represent nearly every quarter of the globe and practically every field of human endeavor will be covered. Barr classifies the conventions as follows: Women's congresses, 44; agricultural, 34; business, 47, educational, 38, fraternal, 60; college fraternities, 44; governmental and civic 24; labor and industrial, 30; professional, 28; religious, 29; scientific, 26; social and charitable, 20; geneological, 15; historical and literary, 5.

The convention will remain in session from three days to two weeks.

GODEY PRINTED COAT.

Spring Outdoor Garment That is Quickly Photographed.

SPORTS COAT AND CAP.

This sports coat of tan and white plaid worsted has large patch pockets both above and below the belt. The belt is held in place by wide straps of brown cloth, which material forms the buckle and facing the collar. One notes with interest the new cutting that slanted like a cowcatcher. The gown which has a deep plait in front.

LINGERIE COLLARS.

Easy Way to Wash and Iron This Neckwear.

See that the collars and cuffs are quite dry after washing before attempting to starch them. Place them in a clean, dry towel and have ready a basin of well made cold water starch.

Mix the starch up well from the bottom, lay in as many collars as the starch will easily cover at one time and let the starch soak well through them.

Squeeze them with the hands in the starch; then wring as dry as possible. Draw them out straight and lay smoothly on a towel, but do not pile one on top of the other; roll each one separately between the towel. Leave for half an hour before ironing, but do not let them get too dry.

When ready to iron spread wrong side uppermost and iron first one side and then the other. Iron slowly at first, then more and more quickly until there is a glossy surface and the collar is dry.

The right side naturally requires the most ironing, but the wrong side must be ironed quite smooth. Lift the collar occasionally when ironing to let the steam escape and dry the starch under it with the iron. A teaspoonful of powdered borax in cold starch will give an added stiffness to linen.

anyone of the monetary awards. The facts that only the votes secured and deposited during the second voting period will count for the cash prizes gives the contestant who stood lowest at that time, the same chance of winning the $25.00, the first cash prize, as the lady who was heading the list at that time. It all depends on the energy, the activity and the success of the vote getters who will carry off the $25.00, $15.00 and $10.00 purses of cash next Saturday night. "Who is who in votedom," however, will soon be known, and these three cash prizes are well worth going after and winning.

It should be remembered by all aspirants for the major prizes in this popular campaign that the winning of the cash prizes next Saturday night will be a double victory. It will carry with it much more than the actual value o fthe cash, for victory in this special event will place the three contestants in a splendid position for the final dash for the California tours, piano, diamond ring, and other major awards. Success on next Saturday evening, Feb. 20th, will mean the setting of a vote getting peace that if maintained until the end of the contest, will place the candidates well up on the list of winners when the final reckoning comes.

Many Surprises in Store

That the voting next week will be extremely heavy is clearly proven by the success in the subscription getting with which all of the ladies have been meeting within the past few days. The increase in the vote standing of the contestants has been rapid during the past week, but this is only a forerunner of the tremendous volume of votes that will be deposited during the coming week. A particularly happy feature about the contest is the fact that nearly all of the contestants are running very close in the voting. The leadership in the various districts thus far is changing daily and in no case is the position held by a large majority. In fact so close is the vote standing of all active candidates that any competing lady may yet be the winner of any of the prizes offered. It is yet anybody's race and it would be the wildest kind of speculation to attempt to pick either the winners of the cash prizes or the big contest awards.

Subscriptions Count Heavily

Every subscription and every club bonus that is secured during this valuable time gives the contestant a firmer standing and a greater chance of ultimate victory. There is indeed much at stake—much is to be done in the short time that yet remains of this popular enterprise, and the wise contestants are up and doing. They are making every minute, every hour, and every day count, they are broadening their campaigns and enlisting more willing co-workers, so great things are to be expected. After the "battle" comes victory—and what a victory. Will you or your favorite contestant be a winner?

or exhibitions." The bill would permit ten round bouts, and the use of eight ounce gloves. At present, mills are limited to six rounds.

Every boxing pavilion would have to be operated under a license issued by the commission, which are revokable in all instances where the management does not file within forty-eight hours, an affidavit as to the gross receipts of any match, and turn over five per cent to the state.

Participants in sham bouts may be prohibited from entering a ring for six months on first offense. The second offense totally disqualifies any boxer from fighting in Pennsylvania.

Violation of any of the provisions of the act, is punishable, upon conviction, by a $100 fine.

The measure asks $15,000 to carry the law into effect. A secretary to receive $1,200 annually is provided for the commission.

MILKOLOGY

Simplified and Perfected

The food value of milk is based on the per cent of butter fat. If you are paying 8 cent per quart for milk testing 3 1-2 to 4 per cent butter fat, milk showing 4 1-2 to 5 1-2 per cent should sell at 25 per cent advance as it contains 1-4 more food value, or if "a bottle of milk is a bottle of milk"(??) why not take the skim at cream prices?

The Pasteurized Milk Co made no increase in price and is furnishing milk testing 4 1-2 to 5 1-2 per cent butter fat, protecting the quality by weekly Babcock standardized tests. Yea!

Further, we have organized a bacteriological board, consisting of three of the best pathologists in our city. Our milk will be analyzed regularly for bacteria by this board, which will devise and suggest every precaution necessary to the delivery to your door of as pure and fine a quality of milk as is produced in the world.

Quality, service, protection, old price.

STEEL CO. HEAD SEES PROSPERITY IN NEAR FUTURE

The United States Steel Corporation is to resume all construction work in the Pittsburg district which was suspended during the depression of last year. This was the welcome evidence of prosperity announced last night by the corporation's president, James A. Farrell, speaking at the Hotel Schenley before the thirty-fifth annual banquet of the Engineers' Society of Western Pennsylvania. It was fitting climax to a carefully prepared paper which he read, and which teemed with optimism, and when its full import dawned upon the assemblage, a wild burst of delight and applause kept the venerable steel king smiling and bowing for several minutes.

The simple announcement means that thousands of men who have been either out of employment altogether, or working upon part time, will shortly resume their labors at full time, full pay, and the inevitable "full dinner-pail" which is the emblem of the prosperity the action will bring to the Pittsburg district.

IT MEANS PROSPERITY TO YOU

WHY?—Because, when the big industries of this country start to work, it means more work for the Railroads—It means bigger trains to haul these products to the mills in their crude form, and to haul them away when they are finished—and bigger trains mean MORE COAL CONSUMED.

Likewise, when these mammoth industries start at full blast—every man working—engines running full time—THEY CONSUME MORE COAL.

And, when the Coal business booms—then is the time that

Mutt Is Certainly Careless With the Family Crockery — By "Bud" Fisher

Making the Little Farm Pay

By C. C. BOWSFIELD

A little interest and effort on the part of the family will make a success of fruit on a small farm. The work is not incessant, but it is important at times and requires intelligence and energy. Small fruits pay well in almost any locality, and they are so easily managed that amateurs need not hesitate about making this a prominent feature in their program.

Raspberries turn many a rough and idle spot into profitable land. A farmer who does not make a few hundred dollars a year from berries is not up to snuff. Black raspberries are usually set two and one-half feet apart in the row, with the rows six feet apart. Planted among the trees of an orchard the red raspberry will do rather better than the black. It is not best to put them closer than eight feet from the trees. Fall planting of red raspberries in severe latitudes is not to be recommended. None of the red raspberry family is of ironclad hardiness, and the young plants, when transplanted in the fall are much more subject to severe or fatal injury from freezing than they would be if well established. Spring planting is by no means preferable in sections of the country where the temperature drops to or below zero. The plants of the red sorts are termed suckers and should be transplanted at one year old, at which age they rarely have more than one cane, which should be cut back to eight or ten inches at time of transplanting.

Prepare the ground as for a crop of potatoes, making furrows for the plants. Set the young plants in the bottom of the furrow, but cover only a few inches at first and draw in soil as they grow. While berries do not thrive in soggy land, they like plenty of moisture in the soil, and sprinkling can be done to advantage.

In setting out currant bushes one should be careful to select a place where there is plenty of light and air. They do not require especially fertile soil, but they do need the sunlight and air. If possible do not put the bushes where they will be weighted down by snow in the winter, for this breaks the branches.

The ground should be worked thoroughly and deep before setting out the bushes, for after the planting only a very shallow cultivation can be done, as the currants are a surface rooting plant. Rotted manure is one of the best fertilizers for working into the land, and after the currant bushes have been set out this will be found excellent as mulch.

Hardy one-year-old plants are found to be among the best for starting a new piece. The plants begin to bear the year after planting and come into full maturity in the third year. If they are given care they will produce paying crops for a score of years. Pruning should be done in the early spring, cutting out all the dead and weak branches and heading back most vigorous growth.

It will be seen that the currant is an easy plant to raise as well as a very profitable one. The same is true of the gooseberry. Very few diseases attack these plants. The currant worm can be killed by applying pyrethrum powder. If there is any disease found to be among the branches it is best to cut off the afflicted ones at once and thus prevent the spread of the trouble.

The methods of caring for the gooseberry plants are practically the same as those used in dealing with currants. It was formerly thought that gooseberries would do best in a shady place, but this is not true. Mildew will attack them if they are kept shaded. The only thing to prevent this is to have the plants kept open at the top.

our friends in front. A regular soldiers' peace! The thing started last night soon after dusk when the Germans started shouting, 'Merry Christmas, Englishmen,' to us. Of course, our fellows shouted back, and presently large numbers of both sides had left their trenches unarmed, and met in the debatable, shot-riddled, no-man's land between the lines.

"Here the agreement—all on their own—came to be made that we should not fire at each other till after midnight tonight. There was a half-moon and the ground was covered with hoar-frost, and one could see dim shapes wandering about or standing round in groups. English and Germans, where it would have been death to have shown a whisker an hour or so before. The men were all fraternizing in the middle (we naturally did not allow them to close to our line) and swopped cigaretts and lies in the utmost good-fellowship. Not a shot was fired all night.

"I was disappointed to see such a cheery lot of fellows, as I hoped to see a collection of living skeletons half covered with rags—animated toast-racks in uniforms. The funny thing is that while we are fraternizing here swopping bully beef for bread, and 'fags' for most execrable cigars (perhaps the gift of a box of these is a sympton of hate), one can hear the dull booming of guns and a certain amount of rifle fire going on in the same old sweet way on our right and left. We neither of us know if our respective artillery behind will respect our little arrangement and abstain from taking advantage of what must be a very tempting mark, but hope for the best, as we are all mixed up in the middle.

"We had heard some awfully interesting latest news—made in Germany—as given out to our friends and which they implicitly believe. The main items are:

"1. The Germans have taken Moscow.

"2. Russians casualties in the retreat, 3 and a half million.

"3. General Joffre is dead.

"4. British fleet is practically destroyed.

"5. The allies have sued for peace, the terms of which have been agreed to and will be published in a fortnight.

"Saturday—The peace, which was supposed to terminate at midnight, still continues willy nilly. The beggars simply disregard all our warnings to get down from off their parapet, so things are at a deadlock. We can't shoot them in cold blood—and if we fire a shot over a man's head as a warning he simply turns round, waves his hand to us, and goes on with whatever he is doing. I cannot imagine a more extraordinary state of affairs. I cannot see how we are to get them to return to business. Our guns, from far away in the background, rather unsportingly landed three high-explosive shells slap in their trench about ten o'clock. That sent them down for ten minutes or so, and then I'm dashed if a couple of them didn't come over and complain about it—didn't seem to think it was playing the game at all. I rather fancy the powers that be are not best pleased with this state of affairs, but I do not see how we can help it. We are to be relieved this evening for our usual three-day rest."

The very day they returned to the trenches Capt. Miles met his death.

Making the Little Farm Pay

By C. C. BOWSFIELD

A little farm must in the nature of things be a family affair. The young people especially should be interested. In many cases boys and girls as well as their parents would love the country if there were less drudgery and if they had a partnership or share in the live stock and vegetables. The family should be in full accord on the subject of bringing money making crops to the front.

There are opportunities for quick returns on products that require little land or labor. Not one family in five hundred has ever grown peppergrass in the full and winter or even in the spring. No other plant is so easy to grow. All it needs is a fairly moist, fairly rich soil and a temperature of the ordinary living room or even less. The seeds will germinate at 40 degrees, and the plants will grow a little at that. If 50 or more degrees can be secured during the day and the temperature not fall below freezing at night this dainty little salad can be grown very easily.

The box in which the seed is to be sown need not be deeper than three inches, and any convenient size for handling will do. Sow the seed thickly about one-quarter or one-half inch deep in rows two or three inches apart, firm it slightly and cover with a pane of glass or two or three thicknesses of newspaper until the plants begin to appear. This is to check evaporation. Then tilt the glass for a few days so a quarter inch crack will be made at one side. When the seedlings get an inch tall the glass may be removed.

No other attention is required than watering and pulling out an occasional weed if any such appear. But the plants grow so fast that the weeds will not be troublesome. In three or four weeks the plants will be ready for use. A pair of shears will be found best for cutting. They should be used about an inch above the soil, so stumps of the plant will remain. These stumps will send out new tops for a second cutting, which may be made about two weeks later.

Onion growing is exceedingly profitable, owing to the high prices which prevail most of the time. This is a product that any one who will work can make a success of. Land that will produce a good crop of onions will grow a good crop of onion sets. The soil should not contain large quantities of raw nitrogenous matter. If stable manure is used as a fertilizer it should be well rotted and, if possible, applied in the fall before planting. A liberal quantity of lime applied to the soil will show wonderful results. The Yellow Strasburg is a good variety, but many prefer the Yellow Globe Danvers. Almost any varieties will do, however.

We sow the seed at the rate of from fifty to sixty pounds per acre. It is advisable to make the rows about fourteen inches apart, running the seeder twice in the rows, as it is desirable to scatter the seed over as wide a space as possible in the rows. In order to have a good stand the seed should lie in the rows at the rate of at least 500 to the foot. The sets are usually kept clean with a hand wheel hoe unless they are grown on a large scale for commercial purposes, in which case the rows are made three feet apart so that a horse can be used in cultivation.

Onion sets are sensitive to weeds and grass, and for this reason the most diligent care is necessary in cultivation. In spite of all that can be done with weeding implements there is always some hand weeding necessary, and the amount of this required will depend a great deal on the way the work of cultivating the crop is handled during the early part of the season.

Beans, potatoes, cabbage, celery and tomatoes are all typical and profitable little farm crops.

A truck gardener tells me that tomato blight can be prevented by a little scheme upon which he fell by accident. His method is to plant carrots between the rows, and he is authority for the statement that if this is done blight will not appear among the tomato plants. He has tried this for two years, and although the disease was bad among the tomatoes of the neighborhood his plants were not molested at all.

The discovery came through the planting of root vegetables among the vines which grew fruit—their tops in order to conserve his garden space as much as possible. Carrots were planted among some of the tomatoes and other vegetables among others. The carrot rowed tomatoes had not a trace of blight, but the farther back the tomatoes were from the carrots the more blight was cured.

CAUSTIC IN COMMENT ARE THE GERMAN PAPERS

Cabinet Discusses It

Washington, Feb. 13.—The German and British notes were discussed at yesterday's meeting of the cabinet, but not formally. It was said afterward that while all the members of the cabinet had not seen them before their transmission to London and Berlin, there was no word of dissent on the part of any of the cabinet officers as to their character or scope.

German Reply Awaited

The publication of the text of the notes greatly interested officials, members of congress and diplomats in Washington. It was generally agreed that the communications were the most vigorous and emphatic that the United States had sent to any belligerent government since the outbreak of the war. Considerable doubt was expressed with wide variation of opinion as to how the American stand will be considered.

Count von Bernstorff, the German ambassador, declined to discuss the note to Germany, as he had received no advices from Berlin concerning it, and the British embassy was also silent

Neutral Diplomats Pleased

While there were no authorized expressions, it was evident that neutral diplomats in general gave both notes their approval, because of the identity interest of their governments and the United States in the circumstances. The opposition of a powerful neutral government to the practices suggested by the Lusitania incident or the threatened attacks on merchant vessels was considered as likely to have a most beneficial effect.

Berlin, via London, Feb. 13.—James W. Gerard, the American ambassador, called on Gottlieb von Jagow, the Foreign Secretary, at 6 o'clock last evening, and presented to him the American government's note concerning the German sea war zone proclamation.

The Berlin newspapers today print a dispatch from London stating that the American note to Germany concerning the admiralty's sea war zone contains a clear intimation that an attack on any ship carrying the American flag, without a previous inquiry as to its right to fly the flag, would lead to complications of a most serious character.

Breach of Neutrality

The Kreuz Zeitung, commenting on this, says:

"This note would amount to a breach of neutrality unless America informed Great Britain that complications of a most serious character would result from the misuse of the American flag."

The Der Tag prints an interview with Herr Erzberger, an influential member of the reichstag, in which the statesman discussed the German [illegible] declaration and its effect on [illegible] countries.

"[illegible] right to make claims," says Herr Erzberger, "but [illegible] may allow them something as a favor. The blockade does not mean that Germany will ignore the wishes of the neutrals as far as they do not endanger the German war plan. But neutrals cannot obtain anything by threats or protests, but only by the free will of the German government."

Mere Waste of Words

Other German newspapers scoff at the indignation expressed in neutral countries over the proclamation by Germany of the new naval policy against Britain. Count von Reventlow, naval writer, says:

"We have always expected American protests and outbreaks, and we expect some even more vehement. The United States should understand clearly that indignation and threats are a mere waste of words.

"The military, political and economic results of our action have all been weighed. We can imagine no threat, no measure on the part of the United States which is capable of intimidating Germany or of inducing it to modify its war against British trade.

Must Take Consequences

"The German government is fully conscious of all the possible consequences of its action, and the German people stand united behind their government. It may incidentally be questioned whether the people of the United States would do the same in all circumstances."

The Hamburger Nachrichten says:

"Beginning on February 18, everybody must take the consequences. The hate and envy of the whole world concerns us not at all. If neutrals do not protect their flags against England, they do not deserve Germany's respect."

LOVE'S TOKEN

SONG FOR SAINT VALENTINE'S DAY

I send my love across the night
To thee that art my heart's delight,
And, though the night be dark, I know
My love will find the way to go.
And, though the path be rough and long,
My love is leal, my love is strong.

What happiness if I might flee
With love across the night to thee!

Germans in Offensive Movement

(By United Press)

Paris, Feb. 13.—The Germans are today attempting to carry out an offensive movement against the allies lines at several points and fiercely shelling Ypres, which has been the scene of much recent activity.

The Belgian-French lines near Nieuport have also been attacked by the Germans in an unsuccessful attempt to break the resistance at this point of the battle line.

354 NEW MEMBERS SECURED FOR THE LOCAL Y. M. C. A.

Clark Boyer's Division is In Lead With 177 Names on the List, While the Other Divisions Did Remarkably Well—General Chairman Sheeder Did Most Effective Work.

The membership campaign closed last evening with a total of 354 new members. It was certainly a great sight to see one hundred or more workers seated in the gymnasium at a supper served by the girls from the Presbyterian church, and when the time came for the captains to make their reports everyone was eager to see what the total score was. From the beginning to the end of the reports there was a great deal of cheering, especially when William Wallace, captain of the Cole, announced thirty-three members for the day's work.

At the beginning of the campaign J. Clark Boyer, who is one of the most popular young men in Clearfield and is an enthusiastic worker for the Y. M. C. A., stated that the division of which he was chairman would secure as many members as the other two divisions together, and he carried out his part in the campaign by urging his teams to secure one hundred and seventy-seven members. This is exactly one-half of the entire number of new members received.

Asbury Lee, Jr., who was chairman of division B, with the aid of the teams in his division, secured 18 mem-

Local Odd Fellows Hold Open Meeting

One of the most enjoyable events in the history of local Odd Fellowship was the open meeting of Clearfield encampment, No. 232, I. O. O. F. last evening. Over one hundred members of the order were present and listend attentively to an address by Wilson K. Mohr, of Allentown, representative to the Grand lodge and P. G. M. of Pennsylvania, who gave his brother Odd Fellows one of the finest speeches they have ever heard. Rev. C. R. Allenbach, of the Lutheran church, introduced Mr. Mohr in a neat speech. A tasty lunch was served by members of the encampment.

Addresses were also made by John H. Moore, R. M. Reed, C. P. McCurdy and John W. Barratt and others. The orchestra of lodge No. 198 furnished some excellent music during the evening, and the affair throughout was one which the lodgemen will not soon forget.

The object of the meeting was to plan ways and means for increasing the membership of the local encampment.

Will Oppose Bill To Regulate Boxing

(By United Press)

Harrisburg, Pa., Feb. 13.—Boxing interests will exert every effort to kill in committee the bill introduced by Rep. S. J. Berry, of Philadelphia, authorizing the establishment in Pennsylvania of a commission to supervise the fistic sport. The measure, which resembles the New York statute, has aroused no enthusiasm in the breasts of fight promoters, chiefly because it would give the state five per cent of the gate receipts.

The Perry bill provides:

That a commission of five members, each to receive $1,000 per year, be appointed by the governor, for a two year term, and to be known as Athletic Commission of Pennsylvania. It shall "have exclusive jurisdiction over all boxing and sparring matches

Swopped Cigarettes and Lies—Hard Work to Convince Germans That Truce Ended—Wonderful War News From Berlin Received by British Soldiers From the Kaiser's Troops.

By P. M. Sarl
(United Press Staff Correspondent)

London, Jan. 30.(By mail to New York)—England lost a near-Kipling when a German shrapnel burst over the British advanced line of trenches in the vicinity of Ypres and numbered among its victims Captain Robert Patrick Miles, of the Shropshire Light Infantry, attached to the Irish Rifles. Of all the letters from the front printed in the English newspapers none had breathed such a spirit of optimism nor portrayed with such humor and intimate detail the life in the trenches as those of this officer. Hitherto they had appeared anonymously. The last he wrote was a description of the amazing Christmas truce, arranged by the soldiers themselves after the pope had failed to induce the belligerent governments officially to enter into such a agreement. It did not reach England until two weeks after his death.

"We are having the most extraordinary Christmas Day imaginable," wrote Captain Miles. "A sort of unarranged and quite unauthorized, but perfectly understood and scrupulously observed truce exists between us and

Washington, Feb. 13—Following the precedent set by the United States, Norway, Sweden and Denmark have entered formal protests to the German government against the recent war zone decree of the kaiser.

AIRMEN BOMBARD GERMAN POSITIONS

London, Feb. 13—The greatest fleet of aerial craft ever assembled for [illegible] tile purposes made yesterday a successful raid against four cities in Belgium, where Germans were believed to be establishing submarine stations.

Thirty-four machines, both seaplanes and aeroplanes, under the leadership of Wing Commander Sampson, of the British navy, rained bombs on Bruges, Zeebrugge, Blankenberghe and Ostend.

All returned safely, although Commander Grahame-White was near death [illegible] while when he fell into the sea [illegible] was a target for German rifles and cannon until a French war vessel saved him.

Advices received today from Paris report that five French aviators dropped bombs today on the German military aerodrome at Habsheim, an Alsatian town in the outskirts of Mulhausen.

Germany Rejoices Over Reported Russian Retreat

(By United Press)

Berlin, Feb. 13.—All Germany is rejoicing today over the reported successes of Gen. Von Hindenburg in the eastern theatre of the war zone. A holiday was declared and enthusiasm is at a high pitch over what is reported as a forced retreat of the Russian forces. Several divisions of the czar's forces suffered heavily, including the crack Siberian Rifle corps. The Germans claim to now have 30,000 Russian prisoners.

Dispatches from the German front declare that the observations of the Russian aerial scouts were all that prevented a rout in the Russians' lines, but these observers foresaw the form of attack of the Germans and a retreat was immediately put in effect.

General Van Ichorn, acting under Von Hindenburg, directed the German forces in the vigorous attacks, and he is today heralded as another hero of the war.

Feared an Attack From German Submarines

(By United Press)

London, Feb. 13.—Great interest was shown today over the sailing of the Cunard liners Lusitania and St. Paul for New York. The cabins of both vessels were filed and they carried heavy cargoes.

Many Americans remained here in the fear that the steamers might be attacked by German submarines, but no uneasiness was shown on the part of the government officials or the officers of the steamship company.

Should these steamers be interfered with by German battle cruisers further sailings may be temporarily suspended. It is thought, however, that arrangements have been made for a fast and powerful escort of destroyers.

WILSON DETERMINED

It is stated at Washington that President Wilson is determined to have his shipping bill passed, even if it be necessary to call an extra session of congress for that purpose. The president knows that the next congress will not enact his foolish and dangerous measure into law, and he still hopes that he can whip a sufficient number of Democrats in the present congress into doing his will.

It is also asserted that, if congress fails to submit to his dictation, the president will go before the people with an appeal for indorsement of his pet measure. Judging from the comments of the mouthpieces of the people the president would find the people almost unanimously opposed to his attempt to aid Germany and anger the allies through the passage of the shipping bill. The people, these critical times, do not want an egotistical and blundering president to touch a match to the powder which may set off an explosion which would do great damage to this country.

The bull-headedness displayed by the president in this matter is alarming to the people of the United States. The position he and his advisors have taken since the European war began has been such as to disgrace the name of America in the eyes and opinions of the nations engaged in the conflict and disgust the people of the United States. He has brought ridicule upon the nation by his shilly-shallying policies in regard to the frequent violations of the treaties of The Hague convention, and now he seeks to turn England, France and Russia against the United States by heeding the demand of a few German-American aliens that the United States shall pour millions of dollars into the German treasury to be used to strengthen the latter's arms to destroy European civilization.

NOT A GOOD SECTION

Somebody has drafted a child labor bill which the state legislature will be asked to pass. This bill is said to have the indorsement of Governor Brumbaugh, and if this be true, then the governor is not in favor of protecting the children of Pennsylvania from slavery. To the layman the bill in question was drawn for the purpose of preventing just what the friends of children want in the way of legislation, and it looks as if certain provisions in the measure were placed there for the purpose of arousing public opposition to its passage.

This bill provides that no child under fourteen years of age shall sell newspapers, magazines, periodicals or other publications. Against this provision every daily newspaper in the state will raise its voice. It is necessary to employ boys to sell newspapers or to increase the price of the papers, because boys can and do do the work at lower wages than older persons would do it. The occupation of selling newspapers is not a hazardous or harmful one, and the boys are given an opportunity to earn a little money in useful work instead of loafing on the streets or in worse places.

It was the hope of the advocates of a child labor bill that a measure would be passed which would prevent the employment of boys under fourteen years of age in mills, mines and factories, where they are given tasks which sap their strength and prevent the development of their minds. But the bill which it is asserted the governor approves exempts minors employed in the mining industries—breaker-boys, whose occupation is one of the most unpleasant known to American industries. Surely there is more danger to life and mentality to boys who work in mines than there is to boys who sell newspapers.

It looks very much as if the framers of this bill placed the newspaper snake therein for the purpose of arousing opposition and giving the legislature an excuse for defeating the measure. That provision was not necessary, and the newspapers of the state should not be slow to warn members of the legislature that it will be an unwise thing for them to vote in favor of a bill containing this provision. The public, which now pays but a penny a day for a newspaper, should also protest against this provision, for its enactment into law would mean an increase to two cents a copy for al lnewspapers bought from boys on the street.

THE VALENTINE

I'll rhyme you, dear, a Valentine—
At least I'll do my best.
Already I've a fair third line,
And hope to get the rest.
A quatrain. Good! By Jove, I've got
At least a fairish start.
But now I'm stuck—And there's a blot!
But I'll hang on, Dear Heart!

Its smoothness may be full of dents;
It's whole construction flimsy;
Devoid of happy sentiments
And sans the frailest whimsey.
But though it lacks Byronic strains
It really doesn't matter,
Just so you know I took these pains
To carpenter my chatter.

Thou hast a love song in thine eye
How's that for pure iambic?
And don't you think it shows that I
Can wax quite dithyrambic?
Well, here's another stanza just
About three quarters done.
Your glance is like the moonbeam dust
Your smile is like the sun.

There, now. The thing's almost complete!
But as I look it o'er * * *
I fancy it were more discreet
To brush it up before
I mail it . . . Gosh! I can't. I fear
It is no use to bandy.
I write a Valentine—but dear,
I think I'll SEND you candy!

—Exchange.

Wilson Threatens Extra Session in His Fight

(By United Press)

Washington, Feb. 13.—President Wilson is fighting to save his prestige in the continued contest over the ship purchase bill. This alone prevented the bill from being laid aside in the senate Thursday. It will probably keep the measure before the body for several days longer, because the president will not acknowledge defeat and is demanding that a semblance of a fight be maintained for his project regardless of consequences.

He declared Thursday that if the ship-purchase bill is not passed at this session he will call an extra session of the next congress immediately and that the bill will then be forced through.

An attempt to force through a cloture rule on the Wilson shipping bill failed in the senate yesterday by one vote.

Representative Kitchin, who has already been chosen by the caucus of house Democrats to succeed Underwood as the Democratic leader in the next house, has declared himself unequivocally against the bill. He went to the White House Thursday in response to a summons from the president and told the president frankly that he did not favor the measure in the senate.

Kitchin has informed the president that he does not want to see an extra session of congress, and that if the ship-purchase bill is dropped now so that the appropriation bills can be put through, there will be no reason for an extra session.

A great many of the house Democrats agree with Kitchin. However, there is so little likelihood that the appropriations can be disposed of that an extra session seems inevitable.

Kitchin put forward in the house Thursday night the new plan to avert an extra session. The compromise contemplates the passage through the house next week of the compromise bill suggested by Senator Gore, with an amendment that would terminate the government's avtivities in the shipping business two years after the close of the European war.

Despite President Wilson's announced determination to stand by the bill now before the senate in its present form Kitchin said the house leaders proposed to put this measure before the senate and give the president an opportunity to accept in the event of the total failure of the pending bill.

The president's attitude is rapidly becoming one of the extreme stubbornness, rather than of executive strength.

He is understood to have approved all the propositions of changed rules anad will be as exacting in whatever fight is made over these propositions as he has been in his demands upon his supporters to this point in the fight for the bill itself.

It is conceded that until the present time the president and his cabinet assistants have failed to create any public sentiment in favor of his bill.

The public has seen the price of wheat and of flour going steadily upward, and the price of bread increased to 6 cents.

The administration is, therefore, caleld upon to state if it is one of its purposes to drive the price of wheat still higher and by the expenditure of public money in reducing the cost of sending foodstuffs out of the country increase bread to 7 cents to the American consumer.

The latest argument advanced by the secretary of the treasury is that there is congestion of wheat at the various ports of the United States and that government ships are needed for its transportation. Market conditions in the last month have shown that every occurrence which has added to the difficulties of transporting wheat has caused an immediate decline in the price.

Senator Lodge severely criticised President Wilson in a speech on the bill in the senate Thursday, saying:

"It is impossible to consider this bill without considering the executive influence that has been the great force behind it. The doctrine of divine right has fortunately never been attached to the president of the United States. But I think the president is one who, when he approaches a new subject, the first thing he does is to make up his mind. Information is looked upon as a mere inpertinence. He recalls to mind a verse popular some years ago:

My name is Benjamin Jowett,
Master of Baliol college;
Whatever is known I know it;
Whatever I don't know isn't knowledge.

"This is an unfortunate attitude even for a college professor, but in the president of the United States it is a dangerous attitude."

WOULD HAVE DEAN FOR GIRLS IN HIGH SCHOOLS

(By United Press)

Denver, Feb. 13.—To off-set the tendency of high school girls to wear the blouses cut too low in the neck, their skirts too short and their hair too high, a Denver school teacher believes a dean for girls should be provided for every high school. The teacher is Miss B. Schmitz.

"Mothers to a certain extent lose the control and confidence of their daughters after they have reached the high school age," said Miss Schmitz today. "A motherly woman who understands how to deal with growing girls should be placed in each high school to advise the young women.

"The tight skirt and the split skirt have gone, but other evils have appeared. The girls are beginning their skirts too short, their hair too high and their blouses too low in the neck. If mothers fail to detect these as well as other offensive things, there should be a woman provided by the school board to help the girls along."

Should Be Re-elected

John H. Moore, Moore, Esq., our present protonotary, has filled the office in a manner that is a credit both to himself and to the voters who elected him. He is one of the most faithful, competent and obliging officials who has ever held this position.

Mr. Moore and his capable deputies have transacted the business of the office during the past three years so as to give general satisfaction to all who have had occasion to avail themselves of their services.

For many years it has been the practice to re-nominate and re-elect the Prothonotary of this county for a second term. Grant H. Thompson and Roll B. Thompson, the two predecessors of our present Prothonotary, were each given two terms. We believe this is a good practice as it results in more efficent conduct of the office and we see no reason why it should be deviated from this year.

The Mountaineer, therefore favors Mr. Moore's re-nomination and re-election.—Curwensville Mountaineer.

NEW JERSEY LAUNCHES WILSON 1916 BOOM

(By United Press)

Trenton, N. J., Feb. 13.—Although President Wilson may not have meant to "start anything" with respect to a second term when he said in his Indianapolis speech that the people might later on have an opportunity to render a decision on his accomplishments, the Democracy of New Jersey certainly has started out with the single purpose of accomplishing that which the president disavowed. The state committee prior to the fall election took quarters here in a building not far from the capitol and past which all the politicians must go on their way to the seat of the state government.

The purpose of establishing these quarters last fall was not for the purpose of issuing campaign literature and helping keep New Jersey in line in 1914 so much as it was to begin the fight that the Democrats of the state intend making in 1916 to return Woodrow Wilson to the president's chair. So whether or not the president's remarks at Indianapolis recently bore the significance that some gave them, New Jersey has already taken the initiative in this matter. True there is not over much activity in the committee's offices here at present, just a stenographer or two handling the mail, but in the windows hang pictures of the president, so that "he who runs may read" the purpose of the establishment, to be the renomination and re-election of Woodrow Wilson in 1916 as president of the United States.

Harrisburg, Feb. 13.—There is no place in all Pennsylvania where President Lincoln's immortal Gettysburg address is perpetuated in bronze. Rep. William Adams, of Luzerne, proposes that this oversight be remedied.

Adams is sponsor for a bill making a $10,000 appropriation to place a tablet containing Lincoln't address in the hall of the house representatives, back of the speaker's chair, just beneath the Abbey picture of the Hoptheosis of Pennsylvania.

At the present time there is no reference to Lincoln in the whole capitol building, although it contains many flags carried in the Civil war.

REWARDS FOR CONSPICUOUS AND EVERY DAY SERVICE IN THE NAVY

Secretary of the Navy Daniels presenting honor medals to thirteen sailors for bravery at Vera Cruz, Mexico. Presentation took place on board the battleship Florida at the Brooklyn navy yard. View of medal also shown.

On the afternoon of Jan. 6, 1914, there were assembled on the quarterdeck of the United States ship Florida in the presence of the secretary of the navy, the commander in chief of the United States Atlantic fleet, his staff, the captains and officers of vessels then in port and hundreds of their comrades of the ranks, who had shared their dangers and borne with patience months of arduous duty in a tropical clime, thirteen of the fourteen enlisted men of the navy who so distinguished themselves under fire at Vera Cruz that they were to receive the much prized medal of honor. It was the tribute of the country, voiced by that branch of the service in which they served, for their meritorious conduct when put to the severest test. In addressing our newest heroes at the presentation exercises Secretary Daniels said:

"The medals presented today are tokens of a grateful country's appreciation of work nobly done, of duty well performed, of readiness to face brave danger. They are given to men who by their conduct under fire have won renown not only for themselves, but for their companions in arms, their comrades who, while hoping for opportunities for themselves, yet rejoice in the good fortune of their shipmates in being where the fight was thickest, the field of service greatest, for that is the ambition of men bearing arms. And that is one of the most pleasing elements in the gratification we feel today—this readiness to extend the merit and the honor to all who wear the uniform.

"You know that the signal most prized in the fleet is the one flying from the flagship telling, with its letters of many colors, that something has been 'well done,' and that, while some particular one, perhaps, has won it, yet the honor is for the ship and all the crew of officers and men whose teamwork has made the winning possible.

"The bluejacket! Let us take off our hats to him in the street, for his uniform is the blue badge of courage; take him by the hand, for his hand protects our homes; treat him with respect, for he rings true, and his heart is of the finest gold."

The medal of honor is the highest recognition any American can receive from his government. All fourteen who received the medal of honor received also a gratuity of $100. Thirteen of them were advanced six months ago to the next higher rating, and the fourteenth man was given permission to participate in the next examinations for warrant officer.

All fifty-two of the other enlisted men who distinguished themselves less only than those awarded the medal of honor received letters of commendation from the navy department. Six were allowed to participate in the next examination for warrant officer, and forty-six were immediately advanced to the next higher rating than they then held.

Such are the substantial rewards the navy accords her heroes. These are, however, symbols of recognition for services that are unusual, caused generally by circumstances we strive earnestly to avoid. Through the dispensations of a protecting Providence we seldom have had to brave the dangers of the sword, and in the annals of our history the peace hero vies for distinction with the hero baptized by fire.

But before relating how Uncle Sam rewards the peace hero let us see what happens to his naval employees who acquit themselves with credit in the ordinary functions of their profession.

Extended service is recognized with increased pay. Every American citizen who enlists for the second time receives a bonus of $5.50 per month in addition to the pay of his rating, and for each enlistment after the second he receives an additional bonus of $3.30 a month.

The sick in active service receive medical care without charge. Any disabled person who has served as an enlisted man in the navy for ten years and has not been discharged for misconduct may apply for aid from the surplus income of the navy pension fund, even though he may be out of the service at the time, and after twenty years of service any enlisted man disabled from sea service by reason of age or infirmity and who has not been discharged for misconduct shall be entitled to a pension equal to half of his pay or be admitted to the Naval home, Philadelphia, Pa.

After thirty years of service any enlisted man may be placed on the retired list if he desires with an income of three-quarters of his pay and allowances for rations, quarters, fuel and light, amounting to $15.75 a month. For retirement all service in the navy, army or marine corps is credited.

In case of loss of life in active service the dependent relative designated as beneficiary receives such pensions as are prescribed by the law, and when disabilities are incurred in the line of duty disqualifying a man for further naval service he receives a pension allowance, regulated according to the seriousness of the injury.

Good conduct is, of course, essential to success in every walk, and, although bad conduct (noncompliance with the regulations, tardiness and slovenly deportment) can be tolerated least of all in military professions, the men who comport themselves well during two enlistments of four years each may, upon the recommendation of their respective captains, wear the good conduct medal, which carries with it 82 cents a month additional pay.

Good conduct is rewarded also with more frequent and extended leave than that allowed offenders of discipline. Leave is always granted to men with good records as frequently as conditions allow, and during the Christmas holidays it is extended over a period of ten days or two weeks. The navy has always sought to lessen any discomfitures caused a sailor or his family through his temporarily enforced absence from home. The presence of a postoffice on every large vessel not only makes possible frequent and prompt communication between ship and shore, but places at the disposition of men at sea the wonderful facilities of the postoffice department, including money orders. The navy also conducts an allotment office at Washington, and any sailor may allot a certain portion of his monthly pay to his family, deducting it from his salary, and it will be sent each month promptly. In this way the families of men on distant stations receive a monthly income as soon as if the relative were at home. Each month the navy disburses about $463,000 by this method of payment.

On board each vessel, accessible to all men in the service, the navy maintains a savings bank, conducted in all respects like a savings bank ashore. Deposits are received, and withdrawals may be made, and interest is paid at the rate of 4 per cent per annum. That the sailor is a saving man is conclusively shown by the figures, $270,677.14 being on deposit on Dec. 31 last.

Considering the hazards of the sea, the loss of life and limb is small. To those who may by extreme and heroic daring have endangered their own lives in saving or endeavoring to save the lives of others from the perils of the sea gold life saving medals may be awarded, and in cases not sufficiently distinguished to deserve recognition in gold silver medals may be bestowed.

Uncle Sam takes pretty good care of his navy boys. It will be seen from the foregoing how he rewards continuous service, good conduct, bravery under fire and heroism in peace; how he nurses in time of illness and in their old age provides comfort for those who serve him long. Many avenues to promotion, with increased compensation, are also available to all in the service. But that is rather the subject of another story. To those, however, who are interested complete information will be sent direct by the bureau of navigation at Washington or the navy recruiting station, Indianapolis, Ind.

His "Junior Partner" Entered.

Littleman was telling the young bachelors at a recent affair uptown just how to manage a wife.

"When you young fellows are married, you must take the upper hand at once," he said. "No weakness, no sentiment! Make your wife understand that, though you love her and so forth, she is the junior partner. If necessary, resort to the effective methods of our cavemen ancestors—use the heavy hand! Put her nose to the domestic grindstone. Why, when I speak to my wife"—

Holland's Abode of Peace.

Zeist, in Holland, is best known as the abode of peace. The religious community of Moravians has been settled there for over a century and a half. Its gray, sober looking buildings stand in their own well cultivated grounds, within which the members lead a life of Quaker-like simplicity. There is little display even of the goods they make, particularly their tinwares, which are sold in small rooms that have no likeness to shops except for the plain counter that runs across them.—London Chronicle.

Research and News.

REV. ROBERT C. PETERS

An Index and a Prophecy.

The report of the research board of the Methodist Episcopal church on its investigations relative to the liquor traffic is both an index and a prophecy. The board wanted to know what was the public opinion on the question. In quite the correct way it sought the answer among the newspaper of the country, the reflectors of that public view.

A review of the papers which decline liquor advertising, shows some other items of interest. Naturally the first thought would be that most of the papers were located in the solid south where the negro problem complicates matters and promotes prohibition sentiment, yet the tables show that only 46 of the papers were located south of Mason's and Dixon's line and east of the Mississippi. The remainder speak for the balance of the country.

Strong as the showing made by the research board is, it is not complete. The Philadelphia North American was not on the list, yet the Philadelphia North American accepts no liquor ads. The same is true of the Pittsburg Gazette-Times. Recently also the Chicargo Herald eliminated liquor advertising. The board found many papers taking no new contracts for the class of advertising.

For the one who reads the signs of the times there is no mistaking the meaning of these figures. The public trend is against the liquor traffic. The time of coming of its destruction may divide opinion, but the conclusion is unanimous. The traffic is doomed. The wise dealer is the one who gets out of the business while the getting is good.—The Tribune, South Bend, Indiana.

Charity Board Urges Prohibition

The board of Commissioners of Public Charities, in its biennial report just submitted to the legislature of Pennsylvania, urges the prohibition of alcohol and other drugs, declaring that the state's institutions are filled with their victims. This development is unprecedented in the east.

Pennsylvania is Simmering Again

The courts have wiped out fifty saloons in Columbia county, Pennsylvania. It is an auspicious start of the yearly melee in that state. A Johnstown evening paper aroused the anger of brewery men when it printed the names of the signers of liquor license applications, and thus held them up to "ridicule and contempt," as the liquor men themselves said. Judge George S. Criswell, of Venango county, has announced a change in policy, saying that hereafter men in the liquor business will not be given the benefit of the doubt when they are charged with misconduct. In Crawford county the drys report the strongest organization they have ever had. Evangelistic campaigns in various parts of the state have troubled the saloon men greatly. In Warren county petitions for licenses are being held back until the departure of an evangelist.

One of the notable victories for the dry forces was the decision of the Boyce Weeklies, including the Chicago Saturday Blade, to eliminate all liquor advertising. In a powerful editorial announcement the Chicago Blade says: "Alcohol is a poison, and the Boyce Weeklies will hereafter print no advertising of whisky, wines, beer or other alcoholic liquors."

DRESS WARM AND KEEP FEET DRY

Tells Rheumatism Sufferers to Take Salts and Get Rid of Uric Acid.

Rheumatism is no respector of age, sex, color or rank. If not the most dangerous of human afflictions it is one of the most painful. Those subject to rheumatism should eat less meat, dress as warmly as possible, avoid any undue exposure and, above all, drink lots of pure water.

Rheumatism is caused by uric acid which is generated in the bowels and absorbed into the blood. It is the function of the kidneys to filter this acid from the blood and cast it out in the urine; the pores of the skin are also a means of freeing the blood of this impurity. In damp and chilly, cold weather the skin pores are closed thus forcing the kidneys to do double work, they become weak and sluggish and fail to eliminate this uric acid which keeps accumulating and circulating through the system, eventually settling in the joints and muscles causing stiffness, soreness and pain called rheumatism.

At the first twinge of rheumatism get from any pharmacy about four ounces of Jad Salts; put a tablespoonful in a glass of water and drink before breakfast each morning for a week. This is said to eliminate uric acid by stimulating the kidneys to normal action, thus ridding the blood of these impurities.

Jad Salts is inexpensive, harmless and is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia and is used with excellent results by thousands of folks who are subject to rheumatism. Here you have a pleasant, effervescent lithia-water drink which overcomes uric acid and is beneficial to your kidneys as well.

SUNDAY SCHOOL.

Lesson VII.—First Quarter, For Feb. 14, 1915.

THE INTERNATIONAL SERIES.

Text of the Lesson, I Sam. iii, 1-13, 19, 20—Memory Verses, 8, 9—Golden Text, I Sam. iii, 9—Commentary Prepared by Rev. D. M. Stearns.

What a specially great lesson this is for boys, with something for every one, young and old. In all Scripture there is a message from the heart of God to each individual heart that reads. It is true always, as in the last verse of our lesson chapter, that the Lord reveals Himself by His word. The Scriptures are the revelation of God to man, and the Lord Jesus Christ is the Living Word, in whom we see the Father, even as He said, "He that hath seen Me hath seen the Father" (John xiv, 9). Our lesson opens with Samuel ministering unto the Lord. See also chapter ii, 11, 18. This is not the word which is translated to "minister in the priest's office," but the word to serve or minister, as when Joshua ministered to Moses (Ex. xxxiii, 11; Josh. i, 1).

Even a child can serve Him who came not to be ministered unto, but to minister (Matt. xx, 28). May we always be able to say from the heart, "Whose I am and whom I serve," and count it our highest privilege to minister unto Him (Acts xxvii, 23; Luke viii, 3; Dan. vi, 16). In the revised version the words "precious" and "open" are in the margin "rare" and "frequent," and the meaning probably is that any special message from the Lord was of rare occurrence or it had been some time since He had spoken. The book of Judges ended with every man doing right in his own eyes (xxi, 25), and now Eli, the priest of the tabernacle, which was then at Shiloh (i, 3; Josh. xviii, 1, 10), was somewhat out of fellowship, for he mistook broken hearted, praying Hannah for a drunken woman and did not control his own sons, honoring them above God, so that a man of God had to come to him with a reproof and a warning (i, 12-16; ii, 27-36).

Before we consider the call of Samuel in our lesson let us look at the circumstances of his birth. His father, Elkanah, seems to have been a devout man, going up from year to year to worship and to sacrifice unto the Lord of hosts in Shiloh (i, 3). But he had two wives, which was contrary to God's original arrangement and always brought trouble. Hannah, who had no children, was continually taunted by the other, her adversary, provoked sore and made to fret and grieve (i, 4-8). Her refuge was prayer unto the Lord, and He heard her and gave her this son Samuel (i, 10-20). She called him Samuel because she asked God for him (i, 20, margin), and when she had weaned him she took him to Shiloh to serve the Lord in the tabernacle with Eli, visiting him from year to year when she went up to worship and taking him a little coat (i, 24-28; ii, 18, 19).

The Lord abundantly rewarded her for the gift of her firstborn, for He gave her five others, three sons and two daughters (ii, 20, 21). So Samuel grew before the Lord and was in favor both with the Lord and also with men, and the Lord was with him, and all Israel knew that he was established to be a prophet of the Lord (ii, 21, 26). How beautifully the Lord did bless the boy who was dedicated to Him even before his birth, and how grandly He did reward his mother and cause her to forget her misery and sing for joy! Her song in chapter ii, 1-10, which is also called a prayer, is one of the most beautiful on record.

Returning to our lesson story, we read that one night, or perhaps toward the dawn (verses 2, 3, 15), Samuel heard some one call him, and, supposing it to be Eli, he ran to him, but, on being assured that Eli had not called him, he lay down again. The second time he heard his name and went again to Eli, but was assured as before. Not until he heard his name the third time and for the third time went to Eli with the words "Here am I" did Eli perceive that the Lord was calling the child. Then he said to him, "If you are called again say, 'Speak, Lord, for thy servant heareth.'" For the fourth time the Lord called him and this time mentioned his name twice—"Samuel, Samuel."

I have found only seven people in the Bible who were thus addressed, and there must be some significance in it, whether we can see it or not. Look them up and ponder the circumstances prayerfully. On hearing this fourth call Samuel replied as Eli taught him, and then the Lord gave to Samuel the solemn message for Eli, which he faithfully repeated to him in the morning, telling him every whit and hiding nothing from him. It is doubtful if either of them slept again that night. Samuel had his first message directly from the Lord, and Eli was no doubt wondering what it could be. They each had enough to think about. Samuel from this time onward seems to have had always an ear for God. Note the peculiar language of I Sam. ix, 15, and may we all have similarly anointed ears to hear His voice. Eli saw the justice of it all, remembering no doubt the words of the man of God in chapter ii, 27, and he submissively said: "It is the Lord. Let Him do what seemeth Him good" (verse 18). Compare Job i, 21; ii, 10; Ps. xxxix, 9; Isa. xxxviii, 15; xxxix, 8.

A Violet and a Valentine

By RUBY DOUGLAS EVANS.

[Copyright, 1913, by American Press Association.]

VIOLET SARGENT slipped into a pretty kimono and then sought the most comfortable chair her small room afforded. Already her tiny kettle was beginning to sing over its steady blue flame and the miniature table was gleaming with its white cloth and single cup and plate.

It was her custom to eat her evening meal alone in her little hall room. But tonight—it was the eve of St. Valentine's day—she was conscious of a vague longing for companionship. And not even a lace paper heart had greeted her in the dingy hall below to tell her it was St. Valentine's anniversary. How completely the home folks in the western town had forgotten! It was true, she admitted, she had few home folks left.

She was roused from her reverie by a loud noise on the stairs below. Some one was bringing up a trunk. Violet wondered whose it might be.

A thundering noise on the door startled her from her first mouthful of dinner. She jumped to her feet and, remembering her attire, opened the door on a crack to tell the expressman he was in the wrong place.

"Miss Violet Sargent," announced the gruff voice of the man, and he thrust open the door and deposited his burden in the only available spot in the room. Then without further words he was gone.

Violet closed the door and stood staring at the trunk. It was new and strong and large. And on it in inimitable letters was painted her own name, Violet Sargent, with the address.

The trunk was securely strapped and locked. Furthermore, it took up the only floor space she had in the room. But she was helpless. She could not unlock it, for she had no key.

A moment after she had climbed over it to resume her dinner there came another knock upon the door.

"Yes?" she called, hoping she might not have to scale the trunk again.

"Miss Sargent?" called a boy.

Violet opened the door to receive a note addressed to her. She signed for it and closed the door again. It was addressed in typewriting and was quiky. There was no clew to the sender on the envelope.

She tore open the message and beheld a trunk key folded within a type written note which said, "This is the key to your valentine."

The inside of the trunk was [illegible] and composed of many boxes and [illegible], and as the girl opened one after another her color deepened and [illegible] tears rolled down her cheeks.

One by one she laid [illegible] chairs all about her [illegible] of garments, from [illegible] own size to a wedding gown of [illegible] satin. In her wildest dreams [illegible] days when she had been [illegible] Bob Saunders, in those happy days before she had decided to [illegible] make her own way in the world, had not fancied anything so [illegible].

And who but Bob could [illegible]. It had been at a Valentine party years ago that she and Bob had become engaged.

She was startled by a third knock at her door, this time a gentle, [illegible] knock. "Yes?" called Violet, dashing her eyes.

"It's Katie, Miss Sargent," came the soft brogue of the maid.

"Come in, Katie."

The girl opened the door and closed it behind her. She spoke in an [illegible] brogue, and her eyes grew [illegible] with wonder as she beheld the [illegible] array of unmistakable [illegible] finery lying about the room.

"There's—there's a lady and gentleman below. They want to see you," announced Katie.

"Who are they?" Violet asked, trembling from head to foot.

"They said you'd know, and Miss Sargent, I—they came in a [illegible] and it's standing [illegible] waiting for them now. The lady [illegible] to me to have you dress in—in your new clothes before meeting down, but they would wait."

For a few moments Violet stood looking helplessly about her, the girl staring. At last, impulsively, she looked up.

"Katie," she said, "please close the door and help me to dress."

"Yes, ma'am, I will," said Katie.

It took half an hour to select the dainty clothes and don them.

"Now, Katie, will I do?" asked Violet, flushed and happy. As she glanced she had reasoned it all out logically in her mind, and the situation seemed as conventional as if she had always known this was to be her wedding night.

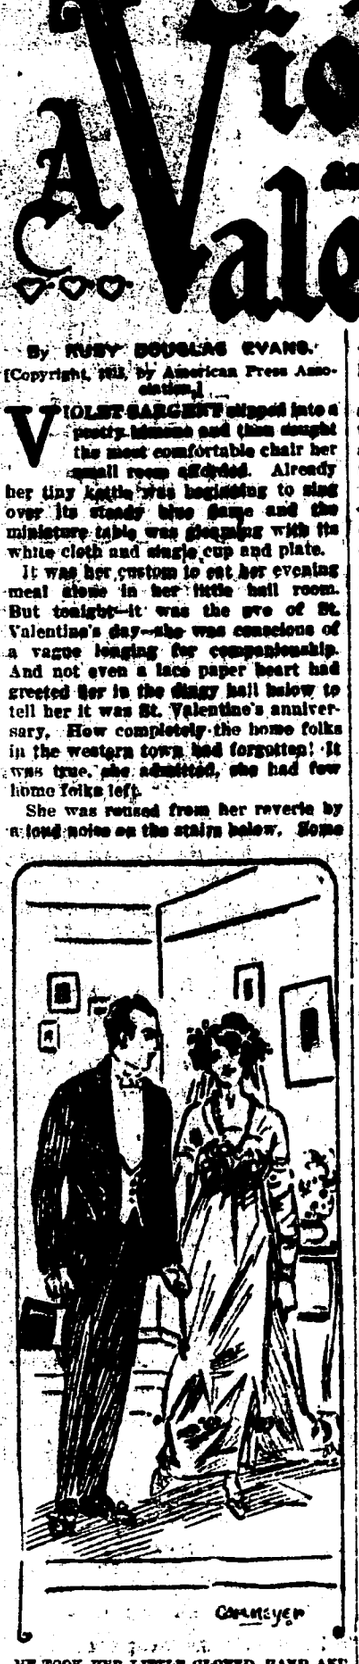

"Katie, I—I haven't said anything about this to any one. It isn't [illegible] a boarding house where you know no one, but—I'm going to be married. So I'll return and [illegible] everything to Mrs. Jordan, but meantime will you straighten my things and pack the trunk and my own with all but my garments to wear?"

When Violet reached the foot of the stairs there stood Bob, his eyes devouring her. He knew by the length of time she had taken that she had understood and was coming down to be his bride. He took the little gloved hand she gave him and led her to the dining parlor.

"Violet!" cried Bob's married sister, "I have been nearly shaking to death with nervousness. I never heard of such a mad, romantic thing in all my life. Bob has the temerity of a brigadier general. Now let's hurry!"

And Violet was hurried off with her sister to-now and husband to be to the little church where the minister was in readiness to make her Bob's wife.

"I knew you'd be more apt to marry me in this mad, unconventional way than you ever would in a sane and dignified fashion," said her husband hours afterward. "And I couldn't bear to think of your working here in New York alone any longer, even though you declared to me you loved it and—probably would never marry me!"

HE TOOK HER LITTLE GLOVED HAND AND LED HER INTO THE PARLOR.

VALENTINE DAY PARTIES.

The 14th of February is becoming popularly chosen for children's parties, at which St. Valentine rules supreme. The following hints for table decorations may be of use:

Get heavy red pasteboard hearts of the largest size. Take four of these and tie the points of the hearts together at the top with narrow red ribbon of the same shade; then set them in tent fashion in the center of the table. Through the openings at the bottom of the tent let the same narrow red ribbon extend to each place; on each end of the ribbon inside the tent tie valentines for each guest. At a given signal you may allow each guest to draw forth his or her individual valentine.

The heart tent can be decorated also with small red hearts, all tied to the ribbon at the top and allowed to hang profusely in every direction at ribbon ends.

AID FOR ST. VALENTINE.

Old Time Books Instructed Lovers In Art of Writing Love Letters.

"Carvalho's Polite Valentine Writer; or, The Lovers' Repository," a little book published nearly a hundred years ago, contains "a capital collection of all the new valentines and answers"—for the recipient was in duty bound to respond to her lover's assault upon her heart.

The following amorous ditty in script was subjoined to a picture, highly colored, of a girl eagerly stretching out her hand to receive a missive held in the beak of a dove:

A Letter from the Youth I love,
Pray, give it me my pretty Dove;
May Cupid both our hearts incline
To grace the morn of Valentine.

Briefly conclusive is this one:

Sweetly smiling, quite divine,
I chuse thee for my Valentine.

A sample of a reply for a girl to use to an unwelcome suitor is this:

Dear sir, you're so foppish
And scented so fine;
I'll not have a man monkey
For my Valentine.

A VALENTINE

By ARTHUR J. BURDICK

[Copyright, 1915, by American Press Association.]

Sweet Love passed through the garden
And plucked a rose for me.
I took it, and I kissed it.
I send it, dear, to thee.
For, though 'tis fair and fragrant,
Its beauty is not mine.
Love, bear it to my dear one
And lay it on her shrine.

The rose is lacking beauty
When 'tis not shared with thee.
Its sweetness is but wasted
If known alone by me.
So Love shall bear it further.
'Tis thine by right divine,
For beauty's stamp is on it
And makes it only thine.

"I SEND LOVE TO THEE WINGING, TO SING WHERE THOU CANST HEAR."

Love paused beneath my window
And sang a tender lay.
I bade him cease his singing
And fare him on his way.
That song, indeed, is wasted
Which falls not on thy ear.
I send Love to thee winging,
To sing where thou canst hear.

And if Love's roses please thee
And if Love's songs are sweet
I've songs to sing and roses
To scatter at thy feet.
And songs will be the sweeter
And roses seem more fair,
Dear heart, if one who loves thee
Can in thy pleasures share.

War Caused First Valentine.

It was at the battle of Agincourt in 1415 that Charles, duke of Orleans, was taken after a fierce charge in a vain attempt to retrieve the French fortunes of the day, and for twenty-five years thereafter he remained a prisoner in the Tower of London until ransomed for 300,000 crowns by Philip the Good of Burgundy. In order to relieve the tedium of his long confinement the captive duke composed about sixty love poems, which, tradition asserts, were the first valentines ever penned.

Everybody's Valentine.

To you—somewhere,
Here—there—
Roses may bloom around you,
Maybe snow has found you
On land—at sea—
You don't know me,
Nor do I know you,
But feeling blue
I pen this line
To those who have no valentine!

ST. VALENTINE AS HYMEN.

Got the Credit For Helping Along Marriages Sixty Years Ago.

Just to show that Valentine's day, with all its significance of betrothals and marriages, was not unappreciated in America in the nineteenth century it might be well to quote an advertisement which appeared in the Democrat of Feb. 3, 1853, in Wooster, O.

"The great increase in marriages throughout Wayne county during the past year is said to be occasioned by the superior excellence of the valentines sold by George Henry. Indeed, so complete was his success that Cupid has again commissioned him as his great high priest of Love, Courtship and Marriage."

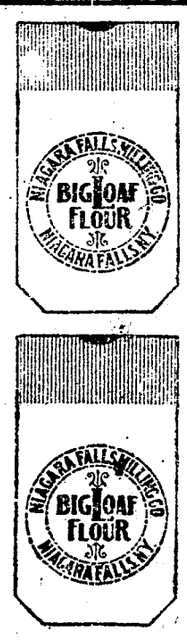

Pepys' Valentine Day.

The immortal Pepys, who chronicled the gossip of England in the seventeenth century, wrote one day in his immortal diary, "I am also this year my wife's valentine, and it will cost me £5, but that I must have laid out if we had not been valentines."

Men Who Give Valentines Must Pledge Votes For Suffrage, Too

MISS SARA MILLER

Pretty suffragist who originated novel idea of winning masculine votes over to "the Cause."

Harrisburg, Pa., Feb. 12.—Saint Valentine has been adopted as the patron saint of the Pennsylvania suffragists. Moreover, they intend to put him to practical use.

The secret leaked out at State Headquarters here today when it was announced that every suffragist in the State who received a valentine tomorrow—and there are several hundred thousand who have reasons to expect one—will ask the donor to supplement his symbol of devotion by a pledge to vote for the suffrage amendment to the Constitution on election day.

The originator of this novel idea to win the masculine votes that are so essential to a feminine victory at the polls, is Miss Sara Miller, of Harrisburg. When she put it up to the executives at State Headquarters they gave it their hearty endorsement, as they saw possibilities in it that were highly practical, as well as romantic.

These possibilities were explained briefly today by Mrs. Frank M. Roessing, president of the Pennsylvania Woman Suffrage Association.

"St. Valentine offerings are usually indicative of affection," she said. "Where there is affection it is fair to assume that there is also the desire to please. The pledge of a masculine vote in favor of the suffrage amendment will please every sincere suffragist. We hope St. Valentine will help us get a lot of them. There's the whole story in a nutshell."

Persons with a mania for figuring may now take out their pads and pencils and estimate the number of valentines it will take to assure a "Votes for Women" victory at the polls this year. The suffragists admit that it will run into big figures, but they are not at all depressed by the outlook. Some of them figure that they can swing even more than one vote on St. Valentine's Day.

SIX CONVENTIONS A DAY DURING SAN FRANCISCO FAIR

(By United Press)

San Francisco, Feb. 13.—An average of six big conventions daily will be held in San Francisco during the life of the Panama-Pacific International exposition which will open here February 20, and run until December 4.

James A. Barr, director of congresses of the exposition, makes this estimate on the basis of advices received by him and he gives assurance that 500 conventions will hold their sessions here. He estimates that these gatherings will bring to the city and the fair between 800,000 and 1,000,000 persons.

Delegates will represent nearly every quarter of the globe and practically every field of human endeavor will be covered. Barr classifies the conventions as follows: Women's congresses, 44; agricultural, 34; business, 47, educational, 38, fraternal, 60; college fraternities, 44; governmental and civic 24; labor and industrial, 30; professional, 28; religious, 29; scientific, 26; social and charitable, 20; geneological, 15; historical and literary, 5.

The convention will remain in session from three days to two weeks.

LINGERIE COLLARS.

Easy Way to Wash and Iron These Neckwear.

See that the collars and cuffs are quite dry and/or washing before attempting to starch them. Place in a clean, dry towel and have ready basin of well made cold water starch.

Mix the starch up well from the bottom, lay in as many collars as the starch will easily cover at one time, let the starch soak well through it.

Squeeze them with the hands in the starch; then wring as dry as possible. Draw them out straight and smoothly on a towel, but do not lay one on top of the other; roll each separately between the towel, and let for half an hour before ironing, but do not let them get too dry.

When ready to iron spread out the wrong side uppermost and iron first one side and then the other. Iron directly on the first, then more and more quickly until there is a glossy surface and the collar is dry.

The right side naturally requires the most ironing, but the wrong side should be ironed quite smooth. Lift the iron occasionally when ironing to let the steam escape and dry the object under it with the iron. A teaspoonful of powdered, borax in cold starch will give an added stiffness to them.

anyone of the monetary awards. The facts that only the votes secured and deposited during the second voting period will count for the cash prizes gives the contestant who stood lowest at that time, the same chance of winning the $25.00, the first cash prize, as the lady who was heading the list at that time. It all depends on the energy, the activity and the success of the vote getters who will carry off the $25.00, $15.00 and $10.00 purses of cash next Saturday night. "Who is who in votedom," however, will soon be known, and these three cash prizes are well worth going after and winning.

It should be remembered by all aspirants for the major prizes in this popular campaign that the winning of the cash prizes next Saturday night will be a double victory. It will carry with it much more than the acthal value o fthe cash, for victory in this special event will place the three contestants in a splendid position for the final dash for the California tours, piano, diamond ring, and other major awards. Success on next Saturday evening, Feb. 20th, will mean the setting of a vote getting peace that, if maintained until the end of the contest, will place the candidates well up on the list of winners when the final reckoning comes.

Many Surprises in Store

That the voting next week will be extremely heavy is clearly proven by the success in the subscription getting with which all of the ladies have been meeting within the past few days. The increase in the vote standing of the contestants has been rapid during the past week, but this is only a forerunner of the tremendous volume of votes that will be deposited during the coming week. A particularly happy feature about the contest is the fact that nearly all of the contestants are running very close in the voting. The leadership in the various districts thus far is changing daily and in no case is the position held by a large majority. In fact so close is the vote standing of all active candidates that any competing lady may yet be the winner of any of the prizes offered. It is yet anybody's race and it would be the wildest kind of speculation to attempt to pick either the winners of the cash prizes or the big contest awards.

Subscriptions Count Heavily

Every subscription and every club bonus that is secured during this valuable time gives the contestant a firmer standing and a greater chance of ultimate victory. There is indeed much at stake—much is to be done in the short time that yet remains of this popular enterprise, and the wise contestants are up and doing. They are making every minute, every hour, and every day count, they are broadening their campaigns and enlisting more willing co-workers, so great things are to be expected. After the "battle" comes victory—and what a victory. Will you or your favorite contestant be a winner?

or exhibitions." The bill would permit ten round bouts, and the use of eight ounce gloves. At present, mills are limited to six rounds.

Every boxing pavilion would have to be operated under a license issued by the commission, which are revokable in all instances where the management does not file within forty-eight hours, an affidavit as to the gross receipts of any match, and turn over five per cent to the state.

Participants in sham bouts may be prohibited from entering a ring for six months on first offense. The second offense totally disqualifies any boxer from fighting in Pennsylvania.

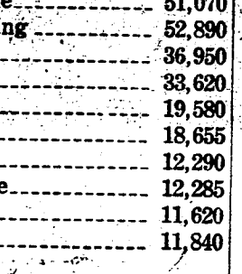

Violation of any of the provisions of the act, is punishable, upon conviction, by a $100 fine.

The measure asks $15,000 to carry the law into effect. A secretary to receive $1,200 annually is provided for the commission.

MILKOLOGY

Simplified and Perfected

The food value of milk is based on the per cent of butter fat. If you are paying 8 cent per quart for milk testing 3 1-2 to 4 per cent butter fat, milk showing 4 1-2 to 5 1-2 per cent should sell at 25 per cent advance as it contains 1-4 more food value, or if "a bottle of milk is a bottle of milk"(??) why not take the skim at cream prices?

The Pasteurized Milk Co made no increase in price and is furnishing milk testing 4 1-2 to 5 1-2 per cent butter fat, protecting the quality by weekly Babcock standardized tests. Yea!

Further, we have organized a bacteriological board, consisting of three of the best pathologists in our city. Our milk will be analyzed regularly for bacteria by this board, which will devise and suggest every precaution necessary to the delivery to your door of as pure and fine a quality of milk as is produced in the world.

Quality, service, protection, old price.

STEEL CO. HEAD SEES PROSPERITY IN NEAR FUTURE

The United States Steel Corporation is to resume all construction work in the Pittsburg district which was suspended during the depression of last year. This was the welcome evidence of prosperity announced last night by the corporation's president, James A. Farrell, speaking at the Hotel Schenley before the thirty-fifth annual banquet of the Engineers' Society of Western Pennsylvania. It was fitting climax to a carefully prepared paper which he read, and which teemed with optimism, and when its full import dawned upon the assemblage, a wild burst of delight and applause kept the venerable steel king smiling and bowing for several minutes.

The simple announcement means that thousands of men who have been either out of employment altogether, or working upon part time, will shortly resume their labors at full time, full pay, and the inevitable "full dinner-pail" which is the emblem of the prosperity the action will bring to the Pittsburg district.

IT MEANS PROSPERITY TO YOU

WHY?—Because, when the big industries of this country start to work, it means more work for the Railroads—It means bigger trains to haul these products to the mills in their crude form, and to haul them away when they are finished—and bigger trains mean MORE COAL CONSUMED.

Likewise, when these mammoth industries start at full blast—every man working—engines running full time—THEY CONSUME MORE COAL.

And, when the Coal business booms—then is the time that

Making the Little Farm Pay

By C. C. BOWSFIELD

A little interest and effort on the part of the family will make a success of fruit on a small farm. The work is not incessant, but it is important at times and requires intelligence and energy. Small fruits pay well in almost any locality, and they are so easily managed that amateurs need not hesitate about making this a prominent feature in their program.

Raspberries turn many a rough and idle spot into profitable land. A farmer who does not make a few hundred dollars a year from berries is not up to snuff. Black raspberries are usually set two and one-half feet apart in the row, with the rows six feet apart. Planted among the trees of an orchard the red raspberry will do rather better than the black. It is not best to put them closer than eight feet from the trees. Fall planting of red raspberries in severe latitudes is not to be recommended. None of the red raspberry family is of ironclad hardiness, and the young plants, when transplanted in the fall are much more subject to severe or fatal injury from freezing than they will be if well established. Spring planting is by all means preferable in sections of the country where the temperature drops to or below zero. The canes of the red sorts are termed suckers and should be transplanted at one year old, at which age they rarely have more than one cane, which should be cut back to eight or ten inches at time of transplanting.

Prepare the ground as for a crop of potatoes, making furrows for the plants. Set the young plants in the bottom of the furrow, but cover only a few inches at first and draw in soil as they grow. While berries do not thrive in soggy land, they like plenty of moisture in the soil, and sprinkling can be done to advantage.

In setting out currant bushes one should be careful to select a place where there is plenty of light and air. They do not require especially fertile soil, but they do need the sunlight and air. If possible do not put the bushes where they will be weighted down by snow in the winter, for this breaks the canes.

The ground should be worked thoroughly and deeply before setting out the bushes, for after the planting only a little shallow cultivation can be done, the currants are a surface rooting plant. Rotted manure is one of the best fertilizers for working into the soil, and after the currant bushes have been set out this will be found excellent as a mulch.

Early one-year-old plants are found to rank among the best for starting a new plant. The plants begin to bear the year after planting and come into full bearing in the third year. If they are given care they will produce good crops for a score of years. Pruning should be done in the early spring, cutting out all the dead and old branches and heading back most vigorous growth.

It will be seen that the currant is an easy plant to raise as well as a very profitable one. The same is true of the gooseberry. Very few diseases attack the plants. The currant worm can be killed by applying pyrethrum powder. If there is any disease found to be among the branches it is best to cut off the affected ones at once and thus prevent the spread of the trouble. The methods of caring for the gooseberry plants are practically the same as those used in dealing with currants. It was formerly thought that gooseberries would do best in a shady place, but this is not true. Mildew will attack them if they are kept shaded. The only thing to prevent this is to keep the plants kept open at the top.

our friends in front. A regular soldiers' peace! The thing started last night soon after dusk when the Germans started shouting, 'Merry Christmas, Englishmen,' to us. Of course, our fellows shouted back, and presently large numbers of both sides had left their trenches unarmed, and met in the debatable, shot-riddled, no-man's land between the lines.

"Here the agreement—all on their own—came to be made that we should not fire at each other till after midnight tonight. There was a half-moon and the ground was covered with hoar-frost, and one could see dim shapes wandering about or standing round in groups. English and Germans, where it would have been death to have shown a whisker an hour or so before. The men were all fraternizing in the middle (we naturally did not allow them to close to our line) and swopped cigarettes and lies in the utmost good-fellowship. Not a shot was fired all night.

"I was disappointed to see such a cheery lot of fellows, as I hoped to see a collection of living skeletons half covered with rags—animated toast-racks in uniforms. The funny thing is that while we are fraternizing here swopping bully beef for bread, and 'fags' for most execrable cigars (perhaps the gift of a box of these is a sympton of hate), one can hear the dull booming of guns and a certain amount of rifle fire going on in the same old sweet way on our right and left. We neither of us know if our respective artillery behind will respect our little arrangement and abstain from taking advantage of what must be a very tempting mark, but hope for the best, as we are all mixed up in the middle.

"We had heard some awfully interesting latest news—made in Germany—as given out to our friends and which they implicitly believe. The main items are:

"1. The Germans have taken Moscow.

"2. Russians casualties in the retreat, 3 and a half million.

"3. General Joffre is dead.

"4. British fleet is practically destroyed.

"5. The allies have sued for peace, the terms of which have been agreed to and will be published in a fortnight.

"Saturday—The peace, which was supposed to terminate at midnight, still continues willy nilly. The beggars simply disregard all our warnings to get down from off their parapet, so things are at a deadlock. We can't shoot them in cold blood—and if we fire a shot over a man's head as a warning he simply turns round, waves his hand to us, and goes on with whatever he is doing. I cannot imagine a more extraordinary state of affairs, I cannot see how we are to get them to return to business. Our guns, from far away in the background, rather unsportingly landed three high-explosive shells slap in their trench about ten o'clock. That sent them down for ten minutes or so, and then I'm dashed if a couple of them didn't come over and complain about it—didn't seem to think it was playing the game at all. I rather fancy the powers that be are not best pleased with this state of affairs, but I do not see how we can help it. We are to be relieved this evening for our usual three-day rest."

The very day they returned to the trenches Capt. Miles met his death.

Making the Little Farm Pay

By C. C. BOWSFIELD

A little farm must in the nature of things be a family affair. The young people especially should be interested. In many cases boys and girls as well as their parents would love the country if there were less drudgery and if they had a partnership or share in the live stock and vegetables. The family should be in full accord on the subject of bringing money making crops to the front.

There are opportunities for quick returns on products that require little land or labor. Not one family in five hundred has ever grown peppergrass in the fall and winter or even in the spring. No other plant is so easy to grow. All it needs is a fairly moist, fairly rich soil and a temperature of the ordinary living room or even less. The seeds will germinate at 40 degrees, and the plants will grow a little at that. If 50 or more degrees can be secured during the day and the temperature not fall below freezing at night this dainty little salad can be grown very easily.

The box in which the seed is to be sown need not be deeper than three inches, and any convenient size for handling will do. Sow the seed thickly about one-quarter or one-half inch deep in rows two or three inches apart, firm it slightly and cover with a pane of glass or two or three thicknesses of newspaper until the plants begin to appear. This is to check evaporation. Then tilt the glass for a few days so a quarter inch crack will be made at one side. When the seedlings get an inch tall the glass may be removed.

No other attention is required than watering and pulling out an occasional weed if any such appear. But the plants grow so fast that the weeds will not be troublesome. In three or four weeks the plants will be ready for use. A pair of shears will be found best for cutting. They should be used about an inch above the soil, so stumps of the plant will remain. These stumps will send out new tops for a second cutting, which may be made about two weeks later.

Onion growing is exceedingly profitable, owing to the high prices which prevail most of the time. This is a product that any one who will work can make a success of. Land that will produce a good crop of onions will grow a good crop of onion sets. The soil should not contain large quantities of raw nitrogenous matter. If stable manure is used as a fertilizer it should be well rotted and, if possible, applied in the fall before planting. A liberal quantity of lime applied to the soil will show wonderful results. The Yellow Strasburg is a good variety, but many prefer the Yellow Globe Danvers. Almost any varieties will do, however.

We sow the seed at the rate of from fifty to sixty pounds per acre. It is advisable to make the rows about fourteen inches apart, running the seeder twice in the rows, as it is desirable to scatter the seed over as wide a space as possible in the rows. In order to have a good stand the seed should lie in the rows at the rate of at least 500 to the foot. The sets are usually kept clean with a hand wheel hoe unless they are grown on a large scale for commercial purposes, in which case the rows are made three feet apart so that a horse can be used in cultivation.

Onion sets are sensitive to weeds and grass, and for this reason the most diligent care is necessary in cultivation. In spite of all that can be done with weeding implements there is always some hand weeding necessary, and the amount of this required will depend a great deal on the way the work of cultivating the crop is handled during the early part of the season.

Beans, potatoes, cabbage, celery and tomatoes are all typical and profitable little farm crops.

A truck gardener tells me that tomato blight can be prevented by a little scheme upon which he fell by accident. His method is to plant carrots between the rows, and he is authority for the statement that if this is done blight will not appear among the tomato plants. He has tried this for two years, and, although the disease was bad among the tomatoes of the neighborhood, his plants were not molested at all.

The discovery came through the planting of root vegetables among the vines which grew fruit—their tops in order to conserve his garden space as much as possible. Carrots were planted among some of the tomatoes and other vegetables among others. The carrot rowed tomatoes had not a trace of blight, but the farther back the tomatoes were from the carrots the more blight appeared.

Cabinet Discusses It

Washington, Feb. 13.—The German and British notes were discussed at yesterday's meeting of the cabinet, but not formally. It was said afterward that while all the members of the cabinet had not seen them before their transmission to London and Berlin, there was no word of dissent on the part of any of the cabinet officers as to their character or scope.

German Reply Awaited

The publication of the text of the notes greatly interested officials, members of congress and diplomats in Washington. It was generally agreed that the communications were the most vigorous and emphatic that the United States had sent to any belligerent government since the outbreak of the war. Considerable doubt was expressed with wide variation of opinion as to how the American stand will be considered.

Count von Bernstorff, the German ambassador, declined to discuss the note to Germany, as he had received no advices from Berlin concerning it, and the British embassy was also silent.

Neutral Diplomats Pleased

While there were no authorized expressions, it was evident that neutral diplomats in general gave both notes their approval, because of the identity interest of their governments and the United States in the circumstances. The opposition of a powerful neutral government to the practices suggested by the Lusitania incident or the threatened attacks on merchant vessels was considered as likely to have a most beneficial effect.

CAUSTIC IN COMMENT ARE GERMAN PAPERS

NEUTRALS HAVE NO RIGHT TO COMPLAIN

So Declares a Member of the Reichstag, Who Says Neutrals Can Obtain Nothing Only by the Free Will of the German Government—Washington Waiting Answer to Note of United States—Neutral Diplomats Pleased With Stand Taken by the American Government.

(By United Press)

Berlin, via London, Feb. 13.—James W. Gerard, the American ambassador, called on Gottlieb von Jagow, the Foreign Secretary, at 6 o'clock last evening, and presented to him the American government's note concerning the German sea war zone proclamation.

The Berlin newspapers today print a dispatch from London stating that the American note to Germany concerning the admiralty's sea war zone contains a clear intimation that an attack on any ship carrying the American flag, without a previous inquiry as to its right to fly the flag, would lead to complications of a most serious character.

Breach of Neutrality

The Kreuz Zeitung, commenting on this, says:

"This note would amount to a breach of neutrality unless America informed Great Britain that complications of a most serious character would result from the misuse of the American flag."

The Der Tag prints an interview with Herr Erzberger, an influential member of the reichstag, in which the statesman discussed the German blockade declaration and its effect on neutral countries.

"Neutrals have no right to make claims," says Herr Erzberger, "but Germany may allow them something as a favor. The blockade does not mean that Germany will ignore the wishes of the neutrals as far as they do not endanger the German war plan. But neutrals cannot obtain anything by threats or protests, but only by the free will of the German government."

Mere Waste of Words

Other German newspapers scoff at the indignation expressed in neutral countries over the proclamation by Germany of the new naval policy against Britain. Count von Reventlow, naval writer, says:

"We have always expected American protests and outbreaks, and we expect some even more vehement. The United States should understand clearly that indignation and threats are a mere waste of words.

"The military, political and economic results of our action have all been weighed. We can imagine no threat, no measure on the part of the United States which is capable of intimidating Germany or of inducing it to modify its war against British trade.

Must Take Consequences

"The German government is fully conscious of all the possible consequences of its action, and the German people stand united behind their government. It may incidentally be questioned whether the people of the United States would do the same in all circumstances."

The Hamburger Nachrichten says:

"Beginning on February 18, everybody must take the consequences. The hate and envy of the whole world concerns us not at all. If neutrals do not protect their flags against England, they do not deserve Germany's respect."

LOVE'S TOKEN

SONG FOR SAINT VALENTINE'S DAY

I send my love across the night
To thee that art my heart's delight,
And, though the night be dark, I know
My love will find the way to go.
And, though the path be rough and long,
My love is leal, my love is strong.

What happiness if I might flee
With love across the night to thee!

JUST TWO MORE WEEKS OF PROGRESS BIG CONTEST

Six More Days in Which To Win the $50.00 In Cash

ALL CONTESTANTS RUNNING VERY CLOSE

Only One More Week in Which the Contestants Can Put Forth Their Best Efforts to Win the Cash Prizes—There Will be Many Surprises in Store for the Young Ladies and Their Friends When the Votes of Next Week are Announced—Likely to be Some Important Changes in the Standing of Candidates in some of the Districts.

One week from tonight at 10 o'clock will mark a big climax in the Progress' voting contest. At that time the $50.00 in added cash prizes will be awarded to the three ladies who have secured the three largest numbers of votes during the two weeks period covered by the special prize offer. Following that climax by just one week, or in other words, just two weeks from tonight will come the exciting finish of this great and interesting campaign that is growing more intensified each day as the end draws near.

Think of it; only twelve more working days of this popular, high class and friendly race that a few weeks ago measured by weeks. The end and the awarding of the many prizes seemed afar off then, but now it is near—very near indeed. So near in fact, is the close of the contest, and the awarding of the more than $1200.00 in prizes approaching that all of the contestants are entering into the vote getting with renewed energy, with a keener sense of appreciation of the prizes offered and with a strong determination and firm resolve that they will carry their campaigns to a successful conclusion on that eventful [illegible] Saturday, February 27th.

Votes Increasing in All Sections

As was to be expected there was a slight decrease in the voting following the very exciting finish of the first voting period last Saturday. The lull was very brief however, for the voting from all sections of the contest territory has now started in with renewed vigor than before. Today's Progress shows a very marked increase in the standing of all contestants. It has been a very busy day for the contest department and this evening promises another rush of voting such as was experienced on last Saturday. The extension subscriptions have been very numerous today and have produced a goodly number of votes for the active young ladies who have worked this important feature of the vote getting.

The strenuous activity that is now present in the contest will continue throughout the coming week, and right up to the very last minute of the big enterprise. The coming week will be an especially busy and productive one for all the contestants, and the distributing of the three big cash prizes on next Saturday evening will make the week end a most happy one for three of the ambitious ladies.

Who Will Win Cash Prizes

The question of prizes importance in this friendly, but warmly contested race, at this time is the winning of the added cash prizes that come as a surprise and are eagerly sought for by anxiety during the [illegible] this cash will be [illegible] fair and comprehensive that each and every one of the active ladies have exactly the same chance of winning

Germans in Offensive Movement

(By United Press)

Paris, Feb. 13.—The Germans are today attempting to carry out an offensive movement against the allies lines at several points and fiercely shelling Ypres, which has been the scene of much recent activity.

The Belgian-French lines near Nieuport have also been attacked by the Germans in an unsuccessful attempt to break the resistance at this point of the battle line.

354 NEW MEMBERS SECURED FOR THE LOCAL Y. M. C. A.

Clark Boyer's Division is In Lead With 177 Names on the List, While the Other Divisions Did Remarkably Well—General Chairman Sheeder Did Most Effective Work.

The membership campaign closed last evening with a total of 354 new members. It was certainly a great sight to see one hundred or more workers seated in the gymnasium at a supper served by the girls from the Presbyterian church, and when the time came for the captains to make their reports everyone was eager to see what the total score was. From the beginning to the end of the reports there was a great deal of cheering, especially when William Wallace, captain of the Cole, announced thirty-three members for the day's work.

At the beginning of the campaign J. Clark Boyer, who is one of the most popular young men in Clearfield and is an enthusiastic worker for the Y. M. C. A., stated that the division of which he was chairman would secure as many members as the other two divisions together, and he carried out his part in the campaign by urging his teams to secure one hundred and seventy-seven members. This is exactly one-half of the entire number of new members received.

Asbury Lee, Jr., who was chairman of division B, with the aid of the teams in his division, secured 18 mem-

Local Odd Fellows Hold Open Meeting

One of the most enjoyable events in the history of local Odd Fellowship was the open meeting of Clearfield encampment, No. 232, I. O. O. F. last evening. Over one hundred members of the order were present and listend attentively to an address by Wilson K. Mohr, of Allentown, representative to the Grand lodge and P. G. M. of Pennsylvania, who gave his brother Odd Fellows one of the finest speeches they have ever heard. Rev. C. R. Allenbach, of the Lutheran church, introduced Mr. Mohr in a neat speech. A tasty lunch was served by members of the encampment.

Addresses were also made by John H. Moore, R. M. Reed, C. P. McCurdy and John W. Barratt and others. The orchestra of lodge No. 198 furnished some excellent music during the evening, and the affair throughout was one which the lodgemen will not soon forget.

The object of the meeting was to plan ways and means for increasing the membership of the local encampment.

Will Oppose Bill To Regulate Boxing

(By United Press)

Harrisburg, Pa., Feb. 13.—Boxing interests will exert every effort to kill in committee the bill introduced by Rep. S. J. Berry, of Philadelphia, authorizing the establishment in Pennsylvania of a commission to supervise the fistic sport. The measure, which resembles the New York statute, has aroused no enthusiasm in the breasts of fight promoters, chiefly because it would give the state five per cent of the gate receipts.

The Perry bill provides:

That a commission of five members, each to receive $1,000 per year, be appointed by the governor, for a two year term, and to be known as Athletic Commission of Pennsylvania. It shall "have exclusive jurisdiction over all boxing and sparring matches

CHRISTMAS DAY IN THE TRENCHES DURING A TRUCE

English and Germans Cease Shooting at Each Other And Fraternize

Swopped Cigarettes and Lies—Hard Work to Convince Germans That Truce Ended—Wonderful War News From Berlin Received by British Soldiers From the Kaiser's Troops.

By P. M. Sarl
(United Press Staff Correspondent)

London, Jan. 30.(By mail to New York)—England lost a near-Kipling when a German shrapnel burst over the British advanced line of trenches in the vicinity of Ypres and numbered among its victims Captain Robert Patrick Miles, of the Shropshire Light Infantry, attached to the Irish Rifles. Of all the letters from the front printed in the English newspapers none had breathed such a spirit of optimism nor portrayed with such humor and intimate detail the life in the trenches as those of this officer. Hitherto they had appeared anonymously. The last he wrote was a description of the amazing Christmas truce, arranged by the soldiers themselves after the pope had failed to induce the belligerent governments officially to enter into such a agreement. It did not reach England until two weeks after his death.

"We are having the most extraordinary Christmas Day imaginable," wrote Captain Miles. "A sort of unarranged and quite unauthorized, but perfectly understood and scrupulously observed truce exists between us and

Washington, Feb. 13—Following the precedent set by the United States, Norway, Sweden and Denmark have entered formal protests to the German government against the recent war zone decree of the kaiser.

AIRMEN BOMBARD GERMAN POSITIONS

London, Feb. 13—The greatest force of aerial craft ever assembled for hostile purposes made yesterday a successful raid against four cities in Belgium, where Germans were believed to be establishing submarine stations.

Thirty-four machines, both seaplanes and aeroplanes, under the leadership of Wing Commander Sampson, of the British navy, rained bombs on Bruges, Zeebrugge, Blankenberghe and Ostend.

All returned safely, although Claude Grahame-White was near death for a while when he fell into the sea and was a target for German rifles and cannon until a French war vessel saved him.

Advices received today from Paris report that five French aviators dropped bombs today on the German military aerodrome at Habesheim, an Alsatian town in the outskirts of Mulhausen.

Germany Rejoices Over Reported Russian Retreat

(By United Press)

Berlin, Feb. 13.—All Germany is rejoicing today over the reported successes of Gen. Von Hindenburg in the eastern theatre of the war zone. A holiday was declared and enthusiasm is at a high pitch over what is reported as a forced retreat of the Russian forces. Several divisions of the czar's forces suffered heavily, including the crack Siberian Rifle corps. The Germans claim to now have 30,000 Russian prisoners.

Dispatches from the German front declare that the observations of the Russian aerial scouts were all that prevented a rout in the Russians' lines, but these observers foresaw the form of attack of the Germans and a retreat was immediately put in effect.

General Van Lehorn, acting under Von Hindenburg, directed the German forces in the vigorous attacks, and he is today heralded as another hero of the war.

Feared an Attack From German Submarines

(By United Press)

London, Feb. 13.—Great interest was shown today over the sailing of the Cunard liners Lusitania and St. Paul for New York. The cabins of both vessels were filled and they carried heavy cargoes.

Many Americans remained here in the fear that the steamers might be attacked by German submarines, but no uneasiness was shown on the part of the government officials or the officers of the steamship company.

Should these steamers be interfered with by German battle cruisers further sailings may be temporarily suspended. It is thought, however, that arrangements have been made for a fast and powerful escort of destroyers.

WILSON DETERMINED

It is stated at Washington that President Wilson is determined to have his shipping bill passed, even if it be necessary to call an extra session of congress for that purpose. The president knows that the next congress will not enact his foolish and dangerous measure into law, and he still hopes that he can whip a sufficient number of Democrats in the present congress into doing his will.

It is also asserted that, if congress fails to submit to his dictation, the president will go before the people with an appeal for indorsement of his pet measure. Judging from the comments of the mouthpieces of the people the president would find the people almost unanimously opposed to his attempt to aid Germany and anger the allies through the passage of the shipping bill. The people, these critical times, do not want an egotistical and blundering president to touch a match to the powder which may set off an explosion which would do great damage to this country.

The bull-headedness displayed by the president in this matter is alarming to the people of the United States. The position he and his advisors have taken since the European war began has been such as to disgrace the name of America in the eyes and opinions of the nations engaged in the conflict and disgust the people of the United States. He has brought ridicule upon the nation by his shilly-shallying policies in regard to the frequent violations of the treaties of The Hague convention, and now he seeks to turn England, France and Russia against the United States by heeding the demand of a few German-American aliens that the United States shall pour millions of dollars into the German treasury to be used to strengthen the latter's arms to destroy European civilization.

NOT A GOOD SECTION

Somebody has drafted a child labor bill which the state legislature will be asked to pass. This bill is said to have the indorsement of Governor Brumbaugh, and if this be true, then the governor is not in favor of protecting the children of Pennsylvania from slavery. To the layman the bill in question was drawn for the purpose of preventing just what the friends of children want in the way of legislation, and it looks as if certain provisions in the measure were placed there for the purpose of arousing public opposition to its passage.

This bill provides that no child under fourteen years of age shall sell newspapers, magazines, periodicals or other publications. Against this provision every daily newspaper in the state will raise its voice. It is necessary to employ boys to sell newspapers or to increase the price of the papers, because boys can and do do the work at lower wages than older persons would do it. The occupation of selling newspapers is not a hazardous or harmful one, and the boys are given an opportunity to earn a little money in useful work instead of loafing on the streets or in worse places.

It was the hope of the advocates of a child labor bill that a measure would be passed which would prevent the employment of boys under fourteen years of age in mills, mines and factories, where they are given tasks which sap their strength and prevent the development of their minds. But the bill which it is asserted the governor approves exempts miners employed in the mining industries—breaker-boys, whose occupation is one of the most unpleasant known to American industries. Surely there is more danger to life and mentality to boys who work in mines than there is to boys who sell newspapers.

It looks very much as if the framers of this bill placed the newspaper snake therein for the purpose of arousing opposition and giving the legislature an excuse for defeating the measure. That provision was not necessary, and the newspapers of the state should not be slow to warn members of the legislature that it will be an unwise thing for them to vote in favor of a bill containing this provision. The public, which now pays but a penny a day for a newspaper, should also protest against this provision, for its enactment into law would mean an increase to two cents a copy for al lnewspapers bought from boys on the street.

THE VALENTINE

I'll rhyme you, dear, a Valentine—
At least I'll do my best.
Already I've a fair third line,
And hope to get the rest.
A quatrain. Good! By Jove, I've got
At least a fairish start—
But now I'm stuck—And there's a blot!
But I'll hang on, Dear Heart!

Its smoothness may be full of dents;
It's whole construction flimsy;
Devoid of happy sentiments
And sans the frailest whimsey.
But though it lacks Byronic strains
It really doesn't matter.
Just so you know I took these pains
To carpenter my chatter.

Thou hast a love song in thine eye
How's that for pure iambic?
And don't you think it shows that I
Can wax quite dithyrambic?
Well, here's another stanza just
About three quarters done.
Your glance is like the moonbeam dust
Your smile is like the sun.

There, now. The thing's almost complete!
But as I look it o'er * * *
I fancy it were more discreet
To brush it up before
I mail it . . . Gosh! I can't. I fear
It is no use to handy.
I write a Valentine—but dear,
I think I'll SEND you candy!

—Exchange.

(By United Press)

Washington, Feb. 13.—President Wilson is fighting to save his prestige in the continued contest over the ship purchase bill. This alone prevented the bill from being laid aside in the senate Thursday. It will probably keep the measure before the body for several days longer, because the president will not acknowledge defeat and is demanding that a semblance of a fight be maintained for his project regardless of consequences.

He declared Thursday that if the ship-purchase bill is not passed at this session he will call an extra session of the next congress immediately and that the bill will then be forced through.

An attempt to force through a cloture rule on the Wilson shipping bill failed in the senate yesterday by one vote.

Representative Kitchin, who has already been chosen by the caucus of house Democrats to succeed Underwood as the Democratic leader in the next house, has declared himself unequivocally against the bill. He went to the White House Thursday in response to a summons from the president and told the president frankly that he did not favor the measure in the senate.

Kitchin has informed the president that he does not want to see an extra session of congress, and that if the ship-purchase bill is dropped now so that the appropriation bills can be put through, there will be no reason for an extra session.

A great many of the house Democrats agree with Kitchin. However, there is so little likelihood that the appropriations can be disposed of that an extra session seems inevitable.

Kitchin put forward in the house Thursday night the new plan to avert an extra session. The compromise contemplates the passage through the house next week of the compromise bill suggested by Senator Gore, with an amendment that would terminate the government's avtivities in the shipping business two years after the close of the European war.

Despite President Wilson's announced determination to stand by the bill now before the senate in its present form Kitchin said the house leaders proposed to put this measure before the senate and give the president an opportunity to accept in the event of the total failure of the pending bill.

The president's attitude is rapidly becoming one of the extreme stubbornness, rather than of executive strength.

He is understood to have approved all the propositions of changed rules anad will be as exacting in whatever fight is made over these propositions as he has been in his demands upon his supporters to this point in the fight for the bill itself.

It is conceded that until the present time the president and his cabinet assistants have failed to create any public sentiment in favor of his bill.

The public has seen the price of wheat and of flour going steadily upward, and the price of bread increased to 6 cents.

The administration is, therefore, caleld upon to state if it is one of its purposes to drive the price of wheat still higher and by the expenditure of public money in reducing the cost of sending foodstuffs out of the country increase bread to 7 cents to the American consumer.

The latest argument advanced by the secretary of the treasury is that there is congestion of wheat at the various ports of the United States and that government ships are needed for its transportation. Market conditions in the last month have shown that every occurrence which has added to the difficulties of transporting wheat has caused an immediate decline in the price.

Senator Lodge severely criticised President Wilson in a speech on the bill in the senate Thursday, saying:

"It is impossible to consider this bill without considering the executive influence that has been the great force behind it. The doctrine of divine right has fortunately never been applied to the president of the United States. But I think the president who, when he approaches a new subject, the first thing he does is to make up his mind. Information is looked upon as a mere impertinence. He recalls to mind a verse popular some years ago:

My name is Benjamin Jowett,
Master of Baliol college;
Whatever is known I know it;
Whatever I don't know isn't knowledge.

WOULD HAVE DEAN FOR GIRLS IN HIGH SCHOOLS

(By United Press)

Denver, Feb. 13.—To off-set the tendency of high school girls to wear the blouses cut too low in the neck, their skirts too short and their hair too high, a Denver school teacher believes a dean for girls should be provided for every high school. The teacher is Miss B. Schmitz.

"Mothers to a certain extent lose the control and confidence of their daughters after they have reached the high school age," said Miss Schmitz today. "A motherly woman who understands how to deal with growing girls should be placed in each high school to advise the young women.

"The tight skirt and the split skirt have gone, but other evils have appeared. The girls are beginning their skirts too short, their hair too high and their blouses too low in the neck. If mothers fail to detect these as well as other offensive things, there should be a woman provided by the school board to help the girls along."

Should Be Re-elected

John H. Moore, Moore, Esq., our present protonotary, has filled the office in a manner that is a credit both to himself and to the voters who elected him. He is one of the most faithful, competent and obliging officials who has ever held this position.

Mr. Moore and his capable deputies have transacted the business of the office during the past three years so as to give general satisfaction to all who have had occasion to avail themselves of their services.

For many years it has been the practice to re-nominate and re-elect the Prothonotary of this county for a second term. Grant H. Thompson and Roll B. Thompson, the two predecessors of our present Prothonotary, were each given two terms. We believe this is a good practice as it results in more efficent conduct of the office and we see no reason why it should be deviated from this year.

The Mountaineer, therefore favors Mr. Moore's re-nomination and re-election.—Curwensville Mountaineer.

NEW JERSEY LAUNCHES WILSON 1916 BOOM

(By United Press)

Trenton, N. J., Feb. 13.—Although President Wilson may not have meant to "start anything" with respect to a second term when he said in his Indianapolis speech that the people might later on have an opportunity to render a decision on his accomplishments, the Democracy of New Jersey certainly has started out with the single purpose of accomplishing that which the president disavowed. The state committee prior to the fall election took quarters here in a building not far from the capitol and past which all the politicians must go on their way to the seat of the state government.

The purpose of establishing these quarters last fall was not for the purpose of issuing campaign literature and helping keep New Jersey in line in 1914 so much as it was to begin the fight that the Democrats of the state intend making in 1916 to return Woodrow Wilson to the president's chair. So whether or not the president's remarks at Indianapolis recently bore the significance that some gave them, New Jersey has already taken the initiative in this matter. True there is not over much activity in the committee's offices here at present, just a stenographer or two handling the mail, but in the windows hang pictures of the president, so that "he who runs may read" the purpose of the establishment, to be the renomination and re-election of Woodrow Wilson in 1916 as president of the United States.

TABLET FOR LINCOLN'S GETTYSBURG ADDRESS

(By United Press)

Harrisburg, Feb. 13.—There is no place in all Pennsylvania where President Lincoln's immortal Gettysburg address is perpetuated in bronze. Rep. William Adams, of Luzerne, proposes that this oversight be remedied.

Adams is sponsor for a bill making a $10,000 appropriation to place a tablet containing Lincoln't address in the hall of the house representatives, back of the speaker's chair, just beneath the Abbey picture of the Hoptheosis of Pennsylvania.

At the present time there is no reference to Lincoln in the whole capitol building, although it contains many flags carried in the Civil war.

REWARDS FOR CONSPICUOUS AND EVERY DAY SERVICE IN THE NAVY

Secretary of the Navy Daniels presenting honor medals to thirteen sailors for bravery at Vera Cruz, Mexico. Presentation took place on board the battleship Florida at the Brooklyn navy yard. View of medal also shown.

ON the afternoon of Jan. 6, 1914, there were assembled on the quarterdeck of the United States ship Florida in the presence of the secretary of the navy, the commander in chief of the United States Atlantic fleet, his staff, the captains and officers of vessels then in port and hundreds of their comrades of the ranks, who had shared their dangers and borne with patience months of tedious duty in a tropical clime, thirteen of the fourteen enlisted men of the navy who so distinguished themselves under fire at Vera Cruz that they were to receive the much prized medal of honor. It was the tribute of the country, voiced by that branch of the service in which they served, for their meritorious conduct when put to the severest test. In addressing our newest heroes at the presentation exercises Secretary Daniels said:

"The medals presented today are tokens of a grateful country's appreciation of work nobly done, of duty well performed, of readiness to face grave danger. They are given to men who by their conduct under fire have won renown not only for themselves, but for their companions in arms, their comrades who, while hoping for opportunities for themselves, yet rejoice in the good fortune of their shipmates in being where the fight was thickest, the field of service greatest, for that is the ambition of men bearing arms. And that is one of the most pleasing elements in the gratification we feel today—this readiness to extend the merit and the honor to all who wear the uniform.

"You know that the signal most prized in the fleet is the one flying from the flagship telling, with its letters of many colors, that something has been 'well done,' and that, while some particular one, perhaps, has won it, yet the honor is for the ship and all its crew of officers and men whose teamwork has made the winning possible.

"The bluejacket! Let us take off our hats to him in the street, for his uniform is the blue badge of courage; take him by the hand, for his hand protects our homes; treat him with respect, for he rings true, and his heart is of the finest gold."

The medal of honor is the highest recognition any American can receive from his government. All fourteen who received the medal of honor received also a gratuity of $100. Thirteen of them were advanced six months ago to the next higher rating, and the fourteenth man was given permission to participate in the next examinations for warrant officer.

All fifty-two of the other enlisted men who distinguished themselves less only than those awarded the medal of honor received letters of commendation from the navy department. Six were allowed to participate in the next examination for warrant officer, and forty-six were immediately advanced to the next higher rating than they then held.

Such are the substantial rewards the navy accords her heroes. These are, however, symbols of recognition for services that are unusual, caused generally by circumstances we strive earnestly to avoid. Through the dispensation of a protecting Providence we seldom have had to brave the dangers of the sword, and in the annals of our history the peace hero vies for distinction with the hero baptized by fire.

But before relating how Uncle Sam rewards the peace hero let us see what happens to his naval employee who acquit themselves with credit in the ordinary functions of their profession.

Extended service is recognized with increased pay. Every American citizen who enlists for the second time receives a bonus of $5.50 per month in addition to the pay of his rating, and for each enlistment after the second he receives an additional bonus of $3.30 a month.

The sick in active service receive medical care without charge. Any disabled person who has served as an enlisted man in the navy for ten years and has not been discharged for misconduct may apply for aid from the surplus income of the naval pension fund, even though he may be out of the service at the time, and after twenty years of service any enlisted man disabled from sea service by reason of age or infirmity and who has not been discharged for misconduct shall be entitled to a pension equal to half of his pay or be admitted to the Naval home, Philadelphia, Pa.

After thirty years of service any enlisted man may be placed on the retired list if he desires with an income of three-quarters of his pay and allowances for rations, quarters, fuel and light, amounting to $15.75 a month. For retirement all service in the navy, army or marine corps is credited.

In case of loss of life in active service the dependent relative designated as beneficiary receives such pensions as are prescribed by the law, and when disabilities are incurred in the line of duty disqualifying a man for further naval service he receives a pension allowance, regulated according to the seriousness of the injury.

Good conduct is, of course, essential to success in every walk, and, although bad conduct (noncompliance with the regulations, tardiness and slovenly deportment) can be tolerated least of all in military professions, the men who comport themselves well during two enlistments of four years each may, upon the recommendation of their respective captains, wear the good conduct medal, which carries with it 82 cents a month additional pay.

Good conduct is rewarded also with more frequent and extended leave than that allowed offenders of discipline. Leave is always granted to men with good records as frequently as conditions allow, and during the Christmas holidays it is extended over a period of ten days or two weeks. The navy has always sought to lessen any discomfitures caused a sailor or his family through his temporarily enforced absence from home. The presence of a postoffice on every large vessel not only makes possible frequent and prompt communication between ship and shore, but places at the disposition of men at sea the wonderful facilities of the postoffice department, including money orders. The navy also conducts an allotment office at Washington, and any sailor may allot a certain portion of his monthly pay to his family, deducting it from his salary, and it will be sent each month promptly. In this way the families of men on distant stations receive a monthly income as soon as if the relative were at home. Each month the navy disburses about $463,600 by this method of payment.

On board each vessel, accessible to all men in the service, the navy maintains a savings bank, conducted in all respects like a savings bank ashore. Deposits are received, and withdrawals may be made, and interest is paid at the rate of 4 per cent per annum. That the sailor is a saving man is conclusively shown by the figures, $270,677.14 being on deposit on Dec. 31 last.

Considering the hazards of the sea, the loss of life and limb is small. To those who may by extreme and heroic daring have endangered their own lives in saving or endeavoring to save the lives of others from the perils of the sea gold life saving medals may be awarded, and in cases not sufficiently distinguished to deserve recognition in gold silver medals may be bestowed.

Uncle Sam takes pretty good care of his navy boys. It will be seen from the foregoing how he rewards continuous service, good conduct, bravery under fire and heroism in peace; how he nurses in time of illness and in their old age provides comfort for those who serve him long. Many avenues to promotion, with increased compensation, are also available to all in the service. But that is rather the subject of another story. To those, however, who are interested complete information will be sent direct by the bureau of navigation at Washington or the navy recruiting station, Indianapolis, Ind.

His "Junior Partner" Entered.

Littleman was telling the young bachelors at a recent affair uptown just how to manage a wife.

"When you young fellows are married, you must take the upper hand at once," he said. "No weakness, no sentiment! Make your wife understand that, though you love her and so forth, she is the junior partner. If necessary, resort to the effective methods of our cavemen ancestors—use the heavy hand! Put her nose to the domestic grindstone. Why, when I speak to my wife"—

Holland's Abode of Peace.

Zeist, in Holland, is best known as the abode of peace. The religious community of Moravians has been settled there for over a century and a half. Its gray, sober looking buildings stand in their own well cultivated grounds, within which the members lead a life of Quaker-like simplicity. There is little display even of the goods they make, particularly their tinwares, which are sold in small rooms that have no likeness to shops except for the plain counter that runs across them.—London Chronicle.

An Index and a Prophecy.

The report of the research board of the Methodist Episcopal church on its investigations relative to the liquor traffic is both an index and a prophecy. The board wanted to know what was the public opinion on the question. In quite the correct way it sought the answer among the newspaper of the country, the reflectors of that public view.

A review of the papers which decline liquor advertising, shows some other items of interest. Naturally the first thought would be that most of the papers were located in the solid south where the negro problem complicates matters and promotes prohibition sentiment, yet the tables show that only 46 of the papers were located south of Mason's and Dixon's line and east of the Mississippi. The remainder speak for the balance of the country.

Strong as the showing made by the research board is, it is not complete. The Philadelphia North American was not on the list, yet the Philadelphia North American accepts no liquor ads. The same is true of the Pittsburg Gazette-Times. Recently also the Chicargo Herald eliminated liquor advertising. The board found many papers taking no new contracts for the class of advertising.

For the one who reads the signs of the times there is no mistaking the meaning of these figures. The public trend is against the liquor traffic. The time of coming of its destruction may divide opinion, but the conclusion is unanimous. The traffic is doomed. The wise dealer is the one who gets out of the business while the getting is good.—The Tribune, South Bend, Indiana.

Charity Board Urges Prohibition

The board of Commissioners of Public Charities, in its biennial report just submitted to the legislature of Pennsylvania, urges the prohibition of alcohol and other drugs, declaring that the state's institutions are filled with their victims. This development is unprecedented in the east.

Pennsylvania is Simmering Again

The courts have wiped out fifty saloons in Columbia county, Pennsylvania. It is an auspicious start of the yearly melee in that state. A Johnstown evening paper aroused the anger of brewery men when it printed the names of the signers of liquor license applications, and thus held them up to "ridicule and contempt," as the liquor men themselves said. Judge George S. Criswell, of Venango county, has announced a change in policy, saying that hereafter men in the liquor business will not be given the benefit of the doubt when they are charged with misconduct. In Crawford county the drys report the strongest organization they have ever had. Evangelistic campaigns in various parts of the state have troubled the saloon men greatly. In Warren county petitions for licenses are being held back until the departure of an evangelist.

One of the notable victories for the dry forces was the decision of the Boyce Weeklies, including the Chicago Saturday Blade, to eliminate all liquor advertising. In a powerful editorial announcement the Chicago Blade says: "Alcohol is a poison, and the Boyce Weeklies will hereafter print no advertising of whisky, wines, beer or other alcoholic liquors."

DRESS WARM AND KEEP FEET DRY

Tells Rheumatism Sufferers to Take Salts and Get Rid of Uric Acid.

Rheumatism is no respecter of age, sex, color or rank. If not the most dangerous of human afflictions it is one of the most painful. Those subject to rheumatism should eat less meat, dress as warmly as possible, avoid any undue exposure and, above all, drink lots of pure water.

Rheumatism is caused by uric acid which is generated in the bowels and absorbed into the blood. It is the function of the kidneys to filter this acid from the blood and cast it out in the urine; the pores of the skin are also a means of freeing the blood of this impurity. In damp and chilly, cold weather the skin pores are closed thus forcing the kidneys to do double work, they become weak and sluggish and fail to eliminate this uric acid which keeps accumulating and circulating through the system, eventually settling in the joints and muscles causing stiffness, soreness and pain called rheumatism.

At the first twinge of rheumatism get from any pharmacy about four ounces of Jad Salts; put a tablespoonful in a glass of water and drink before breakfast each morning for a week. This is said to eliminate uric acid by stimulating the kidneys to normal action, thus ridding the blood of these impurities.

Jad Salts is inexpensive, harmless and is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia and is used with excellent results by thousands of folks who are subject to rheumatism. Here you have a pleasant, effervescent lithia-water drink which overcomes uric acid and is beneficial to your kidneys as well.

SUNDAY SCHOOL.

Lesson VII.—First Quarter, For Feb. 14, 1915.

THE INTERNATIONAL SERIES.

Text of the Lesson, I Sam. iii, 1-13, 19, 20—Memory Verses, 8, 9—Golden Text, I Sam. iii, 9—Commentary Prepared by Rev. D. M. Stearns.

What a specially great lesson this is for boys, with something for every one, young and old. In all Scripture there is a message from the heart of God to each individual heart that reads. It is true always, as in the last verse of our lesson chapter, that the Lord reveals Himself by His word. The Scriptures are the revelation of God to man, and the Lord Jesus Christ is the Living Word, in whom we see the Father, even as He said, "He that hath seen Me hath seen the Father" (John xiv, 9). Our lesson opens with Samuel ministering unto the Lord. See also chapter ii, 11, 18. This is not the word which is translated to "minister in the priest's office," but the word to serve or minister, as when Joshua ministered to Moses (Ex. xxxiii, 11; Josh. i, 1).

Even a child can serve Him who came not to be ministered unto, but to minister (Matt. xx, 28). May we always be able to say from the heart, "Whose I am and whom I serve," and count it our highest privilege to minister unto Him (Acts xxvii, 23; Luke vii, 8; Dan. vi, 16). In the revised version the words "precious" and "open" are in the margin "rare" and "frequent," and the meaning probably is that any special message from the Lord was of rare occurrence or it had been some time since He had spoken. The book of Judges ended with every man doing right in his own eyes (xxi, 25), and now Eli, the priest of the tabernacle, which was then at Shiloh (i, 3; Josh. xviii, 1, 10), was somewhat out of fellowship, for he mistook broken hearted, praying Hannah for a drunken woman and did not control his own sons, honoring them above God, so that a man of God had to come to him with a reproof and a warning (i, 12-16; ii, 27-36).

Before we consider the call of Samuel in our lesson let us look at the circumstances of his birth. His father, Elkanah, seems to have been a devout man, going up from year to year to worship and to sacrifice unto the Lord of hosts in Shiloh (i, 3). But he had two wives, which was contrary to God's original arrangement and always brought trouble. Hannah, who had no children, was continually taunted by the other, her adversary, provoked sore and made to fret and grieve (i, 4-8). Her refuge was prayer unto the Lord, and He heard her and gave her this son Samuel (i, 10-20). She called him Samuel because she asked God for him (i, 20, margin), and when she had weaned him she took him to Shiloh to serve the Lord in the tabernacle with Eli, visiting him from year to year when she went up to worship and taking him a little coat (i, 24-28; ii, 18, 19).

The Lord abundantly rewarded her for the gift of her firstborn, for He gave her five others, three sons and two daughters (ii, 20, 21). So Samuel grew before the Lord and was in favor both with the Lord and also with men, and the Lord was with him, and all Israel knew that he was established to be a prophet of the Lord (ii, 21, 26). How beautifully the Lord did bless the boy who was dedicated to Him even before his birth, and how greatly He did reward his mother and cause her to forget her misery and sing for joy! Her song in chapter ii, 1-10, which is also called a prayer, is one of the most beautiful on record.

Returning to our lesson story, we read that one night, or perhaps toward the dawn (verses 2, 3, 15), Samuel heard some one call him, and, supposing it to be Eli, he ran to him, but, on being assured that Eli had not called him, he lay down again. The second time he heard his name and went again to Eli, but was assured as before. Not until he heard his name the third time and for the third time went to Eli with the words "Here am I" did Eli perceive that the Lord was calling the child. Then he said to him, "If you are called again say, 'Speak, Lord, for thy servant heareth.'" For the fourth time the Lord called him and this time mentioned his name twice—"Samuel, Samuel."

I have found only seven people in the Bible who were thus addressed, and there must be some significance in it, whether we can see it or not. Look them up and ponder the circumstances prayerfully. On hearing this fourth call Samuel replied as Eli taught him, and then the Lord gave to Samuel the solemn message for Eli, which he faithfully repeated to him in the morning, telling him every whit and hiding nothing from him. It is doubtful if either of them slept again that night. Samuel had his first message directly from the Lord, and Eli was no doubt wondering what it could be. They each had enough to think about. Samuel from this time onward seems to have had always an ear for God. Note the peculiar language of I Sam. ix, 15, and may we all have similarly anointed ears to hear His voice. Eli saw the justice of it all, remembering no doubt the words of the man of God in chapter ii, 27, and he submissively said: "It is the Lord. Let Him do what seemeth Him good" (verse 18). Compare Job i, 21; ii, 10; Ps. xxxix, 9; Isa. xxxviii, 15; xxxix, 8.

A Violet and a Valentine

By RUBY DOUGLAS EVANS.

[Copyright, 1913, by American Press Association.]

VIOLET SARGENT slipped into a pretty kimono and then sought the most comfortable chair her small room afforded. Already her tiny kettle was beginning to sing over its steady blue flame and the miniature table was gleaming with its white cloth and single cup and plate.

It was her custom to eat her evening meal alone in her little hall room. But tonight—it was the eve of St. Valentine's day—she was conscious of a vague longing for companionship. And not even a lace paper heart had greeted her in the dingy hall below to tell her it was St. Valentine's anniversary. How completely the home folks in the western town had forgotten! It was true, she admitted, she had few home folks left.

She was roused from her reverie by a loud noise on the stairs below. Some one was dragging up a trunk. Violet wondered whose it might be.

HE TOOK HER LITTLE GLOVED HAND AND LED HER INTO THE PARLOR.

A thundering noise on the door startled her from her first mouthful of dinner. She jumped to her feet and remembering her attire, opened the door a crack to tell the expressman he was in the wrong place.

"Miss Violet Sargent," announced the gruff voice of the man, and he thrust open the door and deposited his burden on the only available spot in the room. Then without further words he was gone.

Violet closed the door and stood staring at the trunk. It was new and strong and large. And on it in unmistakable letters was painted her own name, Violet Sargent, with the initials.

The trunk was securely strapped and locked. Furthermore, it took up the only floor space she had in the room, but she was helpless. She could not unlock it, for she had no key.

A moment after she had climbed over it to resume her dinner there came another knock upon the door.

"Yes?" she called, hoping she might not have to scale the trunk again.

"Miss Sargent?" said a voice.

Violet opened the door to take a note addressed to her. She signed for it and closed the door again. It was addressed in typewriting and was quite ordinary. There was no clew to the sender on the envelope.

She tore open the message and in it found a trunk key folded within a typewritten note which said, "This is the key to your valentine."

The inside of the trunk was spacious and composed of many trays and partitions, and as the girl opened one after another her color deepened and great tears rolled down her cheeks.

One by one she laid on the couch and chairs all about her the most exquisite of garments, from satin slippers of her own size to a wedding gown of cream satin. In her wildest dreams in the days when she had been engaged to Bob Saunders, in those happy days before she had decided to come east and make her own way in the world, she had not fancied anything so beautiful.

And who but Bob could have done this? It had been at a Valentine party only years ago that she and Bob had become engaged.

She was startled by a third knock at her door, this time a gentle, fumbling knock. "Yes?" called Violet, drying her eyes.

"It's Katie, Miss Sergeant," came in the soft brogue of the maid.

"Come in, Katie."

The girl opened the door and closed it behind her. She spoke in an awe stricken voice, and her eyes grew wide with wonder as she beheld the bewildering array of unmistakable bridal finery lying about the room.

"There's—there's a lady and gentleman below. They want to see you," announced Katie.

"Who are they?" Violet asked, trembling from head to foot.

"They said you'd know and—Miss Sergeant, I—they came in a big automobile and—and it's standing outside waiting for them now. The lady whispered to me to have you dress in—in your new clothes before coming down, that they would wait."

For a few moments Violet stood looking helplessly about her, the maid staring. At last, impulsively, she looked up.

"Katie," she said, "please close the door and help me to dress."

"Yes, ma'am, I will," said Katie.

It took half an hour to select the dainty clothes and don them.

"Now, Katie, will I do?" asked Violet, flushed and happy. As she dressed she had reasoned it all out logically in her mind, and the situation seemed as conventional as if she had always known this was to be her wedding night.

"Katie, I—I haven't said anything about this to any one. It isn't best to a boarding house where you know no one, but—I'm going to be married. I—I'll return and arrange everything with Mrs. Jordan, but meantime will you straighten my things and pack this trunk and my own with all but my garments to wear?"

When Violet reached the foot of the stairs there stood Bob, his eyes devouring her. He knew by the length of time she had taken that she had understood and was coming down to be his bride. He took the little gloved hand she gave him and led her to the dim parlor.

"Violet!" cried Bob's married sister, "I have been nearly sinking to death with nervousness. I never heard of such a mad, romantic thing in all my life. Bob has the temerity of a brigadier general. Now be quick!"

And Violet was hurried off with her sister's new husband to be to the little church where the minister was in readiness to make her Bob's wife.

"I knew you'd be more apt to marry me in this mad, unconventional way than you ever would in a sane and dignified fashion," said her husband hours afterward. "And couldn't bear to think of your working here in New York alone any longer, even though you declared to me you loved it and—probably would rather marry me!"

VALENTINE DAY PARTIES.

The 14th of February is becoming specially chosen for children's parties, at which St. Valentine rules supreme. The following hints for table decorations may be of use:

Get heavy red pasteboard hearts of the largest size. Take four of these and tie the points of the hearts together at the top with narrow red ribbon of the same shade; then set them up tent fashion in the center of the table. Through the openings at the bottom of the tent let the same narrow red ribbon extend to each place; on each end of the ribbon inside the tent tie valentines for each guest. At a given signal you may allow each guest to draw forth his or her individual valentine.

The heart tent can be decorated also with small red hearts, all tied to the ribbon at the top and allowed to hang profusely in every direction at ribbon ends.

Old Time Books Instructed Lovers in Art of Writing Love Letters.

"Carvalho's Polite Valentine Writer; or, The Lovers' Repository," a little book published nearly a hundred years ago, contains "a capital collection of all the new valentines and answers"—for the recipient was in duty bound to respond to her lover's assault upon her heart.

The following amorous ditty in script was subjoined to a picture, highly colored, of a girl eagerly stretching out her hand to receive a missive held in the beak of a dove:

A Letter from the Youth I love.
Pray give it me my pretty Dove:
May Cupid both our hearts incline
To grace the morn of Valentine.

Briefly conclusive is this one:

Sweetly smiling, quite divine,
I chuse thee for my Valentine.

A sample of a reply for a girl to use to an unwelcome suitor is this:

Dear sir, you're so foppish
And scented so fine;
I'll not have a man monkey
For my Valentine.

A VALENTINE

By ARTHUR J. BURDICK

[Copyright, 1915, by American Press Association.]

Sweet Love passed through the garden
And plucked a rose for me.
I took it, and I kissed it.
I send it, dear, to thee.
For, though 'tis fair and fragrant,
Its beauty is not mine.
Love, bear it to my dear one
And lay it on her shrine.

The rose is lacking beauty
When 'tis not shared with thee.
Its sweetness is but wasted
If known alone by me.
So Love shall bear it further.
'Tis thine by right divine,
For beauty's stamp is on it
And makes it only thine.

"I SEND LOVE TO THEE WINGING, TO SING WHERE THOU CANST HEAR."

Love paused beneath my window
And sang a tender lay.
I bade him cease his singing
And fare him on his way.
That song, indeed, is wasted
Which falls not on thy ear.
I send Love to thee winging,
To sing where thou canst hear.

And if Love's roses please thee
And if Love's songs are sweet
I've songs to sing and roses
To scatter at thy feet.
And songs will be the sweeter
And roses seem more fair,
Dear heart, if one who loves thee
Can in thy pleasures share.

War Caused First Valentine.

It was at the battle of Agincourt in 1415 that Charles, duke of Orleans, was taken after a fierce charge in a vain attempt to retrieve the French fortunes of the day, and for twenty-five years thereafter he remained a prisoner in the Tower of London until ransomed for 300,000 crowns by Philip the Good of Burgundy. In order to relieve the tedium of his long confinement the captive duke composed about sixty love poems, which, tradition asserts, were the first valentines ever penned.

Everybody's Valentine.

To you—somewhere,
Here—there—
Roses may bloom around you,
Maybe snow has found you
On land—at sea—
You don't know me,
Nor do I know you,
But feeling blue
I pen this line
To those who have no valentine!

ST. VALENTINE AS HYMEN.

Got the Credit For Helping Along Marriages Sixty Years Ago.

Just to show that Valentine's day, with all its significance of betrothals and marriages, was not unappreciated in America in the nineteenth century it might be well to quote an advertisement which appeared in the Democrat of Feb. 3, 1855, in Wooster, O:

"The great increase in marriages throughout Wayne county during the past year is said to be occasioned by the superior excellence of the valentines sold by George Henry. Indeed, so complete was his success that Cupid has again commissioned him as his great high priest of Love, Courtship and Marriage."

Pepys' Valentine Day.

The immortal Pepys, who chronicled the gossip of England in the seventeenth century, wrote one day in his immortal diary, "I am also this year my wife's valentine, and it will cost me £5, but that I must have laid out if we had not been valentines."

Men Who Give Valentines Must Pledge Votes For Suffrage, Too

MISS SARA MILLER

Pretty suffragist who originated novel idea of winning masculine votes over to "the Cause."

Harrisburg, Pa., Feb. 12.—Saint Valentine has been adopted as the patron saint of the Pennsylvania suffragists. Moreover, they intend to put him to practical use.

The secret leaked out at State Headquarters here today when it was announced that every suffragist in the State who received a valentine tomorrow—and there are several hundred thousand who have reasons to expect one—will ask the donor to supplement his symbol of devotion by a pledge to vote for the suffrage amendment to the Constitution on election day.

The originator of this novel idea to win the masculine votes that are so essential to a feminine victory at the polls, is Miss Sara Miller, of Harrisburg. When she put it up to the executives at State Headquarters they gave it their hearty endorsement, as they saw possibilities in it that were highly practical, as well as romantic.

These possibilities were explained briefly today by Mrs. Frank M. Roessing, president of the Pennsylvania Woman Suffrage Association.

"St. Valentine offerings are usually indicative of affection," she said. "Where there is affection it is fair to assume that there is also the desire to please. The pledge of a masculine vote in favor of the suffrage amendment will please every sincere suffragist. We hope St. Valentine will help us get a lot of them. There's the whole story in a nutshell."

Persons with a mania for figuring may now take out their pads and pencils and estimate the number of valentines it will take to assure a "Votes for Women" victory at the polls this year. The suffragists admit that it will run into big figures, but they are not at all depressed by the outlook. Some of them figure that they can swing even more than one vote on St. Valentine's Day.

SIX CONVENTIONS A DAY DURING SAN FRANCISCO FAIR

(By United Press)

San Francisco, Feb. 13.—An average of six big conventions daily will be held in San Francisco during the life of the Panama-Pacific International exposition which will open here February 20, and run until December 4.

James A. Barr, director of congresses of the exposition, makes this estimate on the basis of advices received by him and he gives assurance that 500 conventions will hold their sessions here. He estimates that these gatherings will bring to the city and the fair between 800,000 and 1,000,000 persons.

Delegates will represent nearly every quarter of the globe and practically every field of human endeavor will be covered. Barr classifies the conventions as follows: Women's congresses, 44; agricultural, 34; business, 47, educational, 38, fraternal, 60; college fraternities, 44; governmental and civic 24; labor and industrial, 30; professional, 28; religious, 29; scientific, 26; social and charitable, 20; geneological, 15; historical and literary, 5.

The convention will remain in session from three days to two weeks.

GODEY PRINTED COAT.

Spring Outdoor Garment That is Quickly Photographed.

SPORTS MAT AND COAT.

This sports coat of tan and white plaid worsted has large patch pockets both above and below the belt. The belt is held in place by wide straps of brown cloth, which material forms the buckle and facing of the collar. One notes with interest the new cutting that slanted like a cowcatcher. The gown worn has a deep plait in front.

LINGERIE COLLARS.

Easy Way to Wash and Iron This Neckwear.

See that the collars and cuffs are quite dry after washing before attempting to starch them. Place them in a clean, dry towel and have ready a basin of well made cold water starch.

Mix the starch up well from the bottom, lay in as many collars in the starch will easily cover at one time and let the starch soak well through them.

Squeeze them with the hands in the starch; then wring as dry as possible. Draw them out straight and lay smoothly on a towel, let the wet pile one on top of the other; roll each one separately between the towel. Leave for half an hour before ironing, but do not let them get too dry.

When ready to iron spread wrong side uppermost and iron first one side and then the other. Iron slowly at first, then more and more quickly until there is a glossy surface and the collar is dry.

The right side naturally requires the most ironing, but the wrong side must be ironed quite smooth. Lift the collar occasionally when ironing to let the steam escape and dry the starch under it with the iron. A teaspoonful of powdered borax in cold starch will give an added stiffness to linen.

anyone of the monetary awards. The facts that only the votes secured and deposited during the second voting period will count for the cash prizes gives the contestant who stood lowest at that time, the same chance of winning the $25.00, the first cash prize, as the lady who was heading the list at that time. It all depends on the energy, the activity and the success of the vote getters who will carry off the $25.00, $15.00 and $10.00 purses of cash next Saturday night. "Who is who in votedom," however, will soon be known, and these three cash prizes are well worth going after and winning.

It should be remembered by all aspirants for the major prizes in this popular campaign that the winning of the cash prizes next Saturday night will be a double victory. It will carry with it much more than the actual value o fthe cash, for victory in this special event will place the three contestants in a splendid position for the final dash for the California tours, piano, diamond ring, and other major awards. Success on next Saturday evening, Feb. 20th, will mean the setting of a vote getting peace that if maintained until the end of the contest, will place the candidates well up on the list of winners when the final reckoning comes.

Many Surprises in Store

That the voting next week will be extremely heavy is clearly proven by the success in the subscription getting with which all of the ladies have been meeting within the past few days. The increase in the vote standing of the contestants has been rapid during the past week, but this is only a forerunner of the tremendous volume of votes that will be deposited during the coming week. A particularly happy feature about the contest is the fact that nearly all of the contestants are running very close in the voting. The leadership in the various districts thus far is changing daily and in no case is the position held by a large majority. In fact so close is the vote standing of all active candidates that any competing lady may yet be the winner of any of the prizes offered. It is yet anybody's race and it would be the wildest kind of speculation to attempt to pick either the winners of the cash prizes or the big contest awards.

Subscriptions Count Heavily

Every subscription and every club bonus that is secured during this valuable time gives the contestant a firmer standing and a greater chance of ultimate victory. There is indeed much at stake—much is to be done in the short time that yet remains of this popular enterprise, and the wise contestants are up and doing. They are making every minute, every hour, and every day count, they are broadening their campaigns and enlisting more willing co-workers, so great things are to be expected. After the "battle" comes victory—and what a victory. Will you or your favorite contestant be a winner?

or exhibitions." The bill would permit ten round bouts, and the use of eight ounce gloves. At present, mills are limited to six rounds.

Every boxing pavilion would have to be operated under a license issued by the commission, which are revokable in all instances where the management does not file within forty-eight hours, an affidavit as to the gross receipts of any match, and turn over five per cent to the state.

Participants in sham bouts may be prohibited from entering a ring for six months on first offense. The second offense totally disqualifies any boxer from fighting in Pennsylvania.

Violation of any of the provisions of the act, is punishable, upon conviction, by a $100 fine.

The measure asks $15,000 to carry the law into effect. A secretary to receive $1,200 annually is provided for the commission.

MILKOLOGY

Simplified and Perfected

The food value of milk is based on the per cent of butter fat. If you are paying 8 cent per quart for milk testing 3 1-2 to 4 per cent butter fat, milk showing 4 1-2 to 5 1-2 per cent should sell at 25 per cent advance as it contains 1-4 more food value, or if "a bottle of milk is a bottle of milk"(??) why not take the skim at cream prices?

The Pasteurized Milk Co made no increase in price and is furnishing milk testing 4 1-2 to 5 1-2 per cent butter fat, protecting the quality by weekly Babcock standardized tests. Yea!

Further, we have organized a bacteriological board, consisting of three of the best pathologists in our city. Our milk will be analyzed regularly for bacteria by this board, which will devise and suggest every precaution necessary to the delivery to your door of as pure and fine a quality of milk as is produced in the world.

Quality, service, protection, old price.

STEEL CO. HEAD SEES PROSPERITY IN NEAR FUTURE

The United States Steel Corporation is to resume all construction work in the Pittsburg district which was suspended during the depression of last year. This was the welcome evidence of prosperity announced last night by the corporation's president, James A. Farrell, speaking at the Hotel Schenley before the thirty-fifth annual banquet of the Engineers' Society of Western Pennsylvania. It was fitting climax to a carefully prepared paper which he read, and which teemed with optimism, and when its full import dawned upon the assemblage, a wild burst of delight and applause kept the venerable steel king smiling and bowing for several minutes.

The simple announcement means that thousands of men who have been either out of employment altogether, or working upon part time, will shortly resume their labors at full time, full pay, and the inevitable "full dinner-pail" which is the emblem of the prosperity the action will bring to the Pittsburg district.

IT MEANS PROSPERITY TO YOU

WHY?—Because, when the big industries of this country start to work, it means more work for the Railroads—It means bigger trains to haul these products to the mills in their crude form, and to haul them away when they are finished—and bigger trains mean MORE COAL CONSUMED.

Likewise, when these mammoth industries start at full blast—every man working—engines running full time—THEY CONSUME MORE COAL.

And, when the Coal business booms—then is the time that

Mutt Is Certainly Careless With the Family Crockery

Making the Little Farm Pay

By C. C. BOWSFIELD

A little interest and effort on the part of the family will make a success of fruit on a small farm. The work is not incessant, but it is important at times and requires intelligence and energy. Small fruits pay well in almost any locality, and they are so easily managed that amateurs need not hesitate about making this a prominent feature in their program.

Raspberries turn many a rough and idle spot into profitable land. A farmer who does not make a few hundred dollars a year from berries is not up to snuff. Black raspberries are usually set two and one-half feet apart in the row, with the rows six feet apart. Planted among the trees of an orchard the red raspberry will do rather better than the black. It is not best to put them closer than eight feet from the trees. Fall planting of red raspberries in severe latitudes is not to be recommended. None of the red raspberry family is of ironclad hardiness, and the young plants, when transplanted in the fall are much more subject to severe or fatal injury from freezing than they would be if well established. Spring planting is by no means preferable in sections of the country where the temperature drops to or below zero. The plants of the red sorts are termed suckers and should be transplanted at one year old, at which age they rarely have more than one cane, which should be cut back to eight or ten inches at time of transplanting.

Prepare the ground as for a crop of potatoes, making furrows for the plants. Set the young plants in the bottom of the furrow, but cover only a few inches at first and draw in soil as they grow. While berries do not thrive in soggy land, they like plenty of moisture in the soil, and sprinkling can be done to advantage.

In setting out currant bushes one should be careful to select a place where there is plenty of light and air. They do not require especially fertile soil, but they do need the sunlight and air. If possible do not put the bushes where they will be weighted down by snow in the winter, for this breaks the branches.

The ground should be worked thoroughly and deep before setting out the bushes, for after the planting only a very shallow cultivation can be done, as the currants are a surface rooting plant. Rotted manure is one of the best fertilizers for working into the land, and after the currant bushes have been set out this will be found excellent as mulch.

Hardy one-year-old plants are found to be among the best for starting a new piece. The plants begin to bear the year after planting and come into full maturity in the third year. If they are given care they will produce paying crops for a score of years. Pruning should be done in the early spring, cutting out all the dead and weak branches and heading back most vigorous growth.

It will be seen that the currant is an easy plant to raise as well as a very profitable one. The same is true of the gooseberry. Very few diseases attack these plants. The currant worm can be killed by applying pyrethrum powder. If there is any disease found to be among the branches it is best to cut off the afflicted ones at once and thus prevent the spread of the trouble.

The methods of caring for the gooseberry plants are practically the same as those used in dealing with currants. It was formerly thought that gooseberries would do best in a shady place, but this is not true. Mildew will attack them if they are kept shaded. The only thing to prevent this is to have the plants kept open at the top.

our friends in front. A regular soldiers' peace! The thing started last night soon after dusk when the Germans started shouting, 'Merry Christmas, Englishmen,' to us. Of course, our fellows shouted back, and presently large numbers of both sides had left their trenches unarmed, and met in the debatable, shot-riddled, no-man's land between the lines.

"Here the agreement—all on their own—came to be made that we should not fire at each other till after midnight tonight. There was a half-moon and the ground was covered with hoar-frost, and one could see dim shapes wandering about or standing round in groups. English and Germans, where it would have been death to have shown a whisker an hour or so before. The men were all fraternizing in the middle (we naturally did not allow them to close to our line) and swopped cigaretts and lies in the utmost good-fellowship. Not a shot was fired all night.

"I was disappointed to see such a cheery lot of fellows, as I hoped to see a collection of living skeletons half covered with rags—animated toast-racks in uniforms. The funny thing is that while we are fraternizing here swopping bully beef for bread, and 'fags' for most execrable cigars (perhaps the gift of a box of these is a sympton of hate), one can hear the dull booming of guns and a certain amount of rifle fire going on in the same old sweet way on our right and left. We neither of us know if our respective artillery behind will respect our little arrangement and abstain from taking advantage of what must be a very tempting mark, but hope for the best, as we are all mixed up in the middle.

"We had heard some awfully interesting latest news—made in Germany—as given out to our friends and which they implicitly believe. The main items are:

"1. The Germans have taken Moscow.

"2. Russians casualties in the retreat, 3 and a half million.

"3. General Joffre is dead.

"4. British fleet is practically destroyed.

"5. The allies have sued for peace, the terms of which have been agreed to and will be published in a fortnight.

"Saturday—The peace, which was supposed to terminate at midnight, still continues willy nilly. The beggars simply disregard all our warnings to get down from off their parapet, so things are at a deadlock. We can't shoot them in cold blood—and if we fire a shot over a man's head as a warning he simply turns round, waves his hand to us, and goes on with whatever he is doing. I cannot imagine a more extraordinary state of affairs. I cannot see how we are to get them to return to business. Our guns, from far away in the background, rather unsportingly landed three high-explosive shells slap in their trench about ten o'clock. That sent them down for ten minutes or so, and then I'm dashed if a couple of them didn't come over and complain about it—didn't seem to think it was playing the game at all. I rather fancy the powers that be are not best pleased with this state of affairs, but I do not see how we can help it. We are to be relieved this evening for our usual three-day rest."

The very day they returned to the trenches Capt. Miles met his death.

Making the Little Farm Pay

By C. C. BOWSFIELD

A little farm must in the nature of things be a family affair. The young people especially should be interested. In many cases boys and girls as well as their parents would love the country if there were less drudgery and if they had a partnership or share in the live stock and vegetables. The family should be in full accord on the subject of bringing money making crops to the front.

There are opportunities for quick returns on products that require little land or labor. Not one family in five hundred has ever grown peppergrass in the full and winter or even in the spring. No other plant is so easy to grow. All it needs is a fairly moist, fairly rich soil and a temperature of the ordinary living room or even less. The seeds will germinate at 40 degrees, and the plants will grow a little at that. If 50 or more degrees can be secured during the day and the temperature not fall below freezing at night this dainty little salad can be grown very easily.

The box in which the seed is to be sown need not be deeper than three inches, and any convenient size for handling will do. Sow the seed thickly about one-quarter or one-half inch deep in rows two or three inches apart, firm it slightly and cover with a pane of glass or two or three thicknesses of newspaper until the plants begin to appear. This is to check evaporation. Then tilt the glass for a few days so a quarter inch crack will be made at one side. When the seedlings get an inch tall the glass may be removed.

No other attention is required than watering and pulling out an occasional weed if any such appear. But the plants grow so fast that the weeds will not be troublesome. In three or four weeks the plants will be ready for use. A pair of shears will be found best for cutting. They should be used about an inch above the soil, so stumps of the plant will remain. These stumps will send out new tops for a second cutting, which may be made about two weeks later.

Onion growing is exceedingly profitable, owing to the high prices which prevail most of the time. This is a product that any one who will work can make a success of. Land that will produce a good crop of onions will grow a good crop of onion sets. The soil should not contain large quantities of raw nitrogenous matter. If stable manure is used as a fertilizer it should be well rotted and, if possible, applied in the fall before planting. A liberal quantity of lime applied to the soil will show wonderful results. The Yellow Strasburg is a good variety, but many prefer the Yellow Globe Danvers. Almost any varieties will do, however.

We sow the seed at the rate of from fifty to sixty pounds per acre. It is advisable to make the rows about fourteen inches apart, running the seeder twice in the rows, as it is desirable to scatter the seed over as wide a space as possible in the rows. In order to have a good stand the seed should lie in the rows at the rate of at least 500 to the foot. The sets are usually kept clean with a hand wheel hoe unless they are grown on a large scale for commercial purposes, in which case the rows are made three feet apart so that a horse can be used in cultivation.

Onion sets are sensitive to weeds and grass, and for this reason the most diligent care is necessary in cultivation. In spite of all that can be done with weeding implements there is always some hand weeding necessary, and the amount of this required will depend a great deal on the way the work of cultivating the crop is handled during the early part of the season.

Beans, potatoes, cabbage, celery and tomatoes are all typical and profitable little farm crops.

A truck gardener tells me that tomato blight can be prevented by a little scheme upon which he fell by accident. His method is to plant carrots between the rows, and he is authority for the statement that if this is done blight will not appear among the tomato plants. He has tried this for two years, and although the disease was bad among the tomatoes of the neighborhood his plants were not molested at all.

The discovery came through the planting of root vegetables among the vines which grew fruit—their tops in order to conserve his garden space as much as possible. Carrots were planted among some of the tomatoes and other vegetables among others. The carrot rowed tomatoes had not a trace of blight, but the farther back the tomatoes were from the carrots the more blight was cured.

Cabinet Discusses It

Washington, Feb. 13.—The German and British notes were discussed at yesterday's meeting of the cabinet, but not formally. It was said afterward that while all the members of the cabinet had not seen them before their transmission to London and Berlin, there was no word of dissent on the part of any of the cabinet officers as to their character or scope.

German Reply Awaited

The publication of the text of the notes greatly interested officials, members of congress and diplomats in Washington. It was generally agreed that the communications were the most vigorous and emphatic that the United States had sent to any belligerent government since the outbreak of the war. Considerable doubt was expressed with wide variation of opinion as to how the American stand will be considered.

Count von Bernstorff, the German ambassador, declined to discuss the note to Germany, as he had received no advices from Berlin concerning it, and the British embassy was also silent

Neutral Diplomats Pleased

While there were no authorized expressions, it was evident that neutral diplomats in general gave both notes their approval, because of the identity interest of their governments and the United States in the circumstances. The opposition of a powerful neutral government to the practices suggested by the Lusitania incident or the threatened attacks on merchant vessels was considered as likely to have a most beneficial effect.

Hello! Heh? Yes, we believe the Germans will win—if the allies don't. We also believe that if Shakespeare didn't write Hamlet, Cacon would.

Seems strange, when a few ashes are dumped out in the road a man will assume the dignity and authority of an East Indian Mogul and order it stopped, but when there are numbers of dangerous gullies washed across the road he has no authority to repair it. Funny isn't it?

Farmers are utilizing this fine sleighing to get lime and general spring supplies hauled, and indications are that most farmers will try to increase their acreage this year, for most of our farmers are thinkers and they have figured out that if that fickle Goddess called prosperity should smile upon us this summer, all they will need will be something to sell.
